Big Oil Spill Could Cost Canada $100 Million

● Scenario for disaster. Page 29.

OTTAWA (CP) — A major oil spill on a proposed Alaska-to-Washington state tanker route could cost Canada about $100 million, says a document made public Wednesday.

The estimate is contained in an appendix to a diplomatic note presented Aug. 18 to the U.S. state department by the Canadian embassy in Washington, opposing the tanker route.

In the formal aide-memoire itself, Canada rejected a U.S. suggestion that the two countries consider establishing a joint contingency plan to deal with potential oil spills on the West Coast.

However, the government offered to exchange technical information regarding the tanker situation on the Atlantic coast.

The diplomatic note, together with a series of appendices and annexes, was tabled in the Commons Wednesday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in response to an earlier request by David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich).

Anderson has been carrying on a personal crusade against the tanker route, which would move Alaska North Slope oil to a refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., on Puget Sound.

The U.S. government has not yet given permission for the trans-Alaska pipeline that would have to be built to move the oil from wellhead to tidewater at Valdez on the south coast of Alaska.

The aide-memoire says little is known about dealing with an oil spill in enclosed waters, such as Juan de Fuca Strait, which tankers would use.

However, an attempt to formulate "some values" for a supertanker mishap in the system indicated that a major spill "could result in an economic loss to Canada in the order of $100 million."

This did not include the effect on wildlife — which would be placed in a "precarious position" by a major spill — or esthetic considerations.

Penny-Per-Fish Levy To Fight Alaska Pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alaska's fishermen are taxing themselves a penny per fish to pay for a court battle against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline, which they contend would destroy their livelihood.

"It's just that oil and fish are not compatible," Knute Johnson told a news conference here Tuesday.

"We are not against a pipeline as such," said Johson, chairman of the Cordova District Fisheries Union. "We are not against progress and employment and money for Alaska . . ."

The CDFU is asking that the interior department be prohibited from granting a permit for the pipeline to run 800 miles from the North Slope to a tanker terminal at Valdez.

The 450-member union charges that heavy ship traffic through the Valdez Arm would inevitably lead to oil spills which would destroy crabs, salmon and other fish. Johnson said the area often is enshrouded by fog and is subject to winds of 80-100 miles per hour.

"Historically, the oil industry has run over anybody that got in its way," Johnson said. "Now they're trying to run over our living.

"We're fishermen — that's all we've got."

Bennett

Federal Vote In June Forecast

● Canadians less worried about foreign help. Page 6.

● Parley may mean jobs in future winters. Page 41.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett flew into Vancouver Wednesday night from the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa, predicting a federal election in June and the defeat of the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau.

He said his four days in Ottawa were enough to convince him there will be a federal election in June, and he added: "The present government will be defeated and the Conservatives will hold the majority of seats." He said the Social Credit in Quebec might even hold the balance of power.

But in British Columbia, he said, voters shouldn't count on going to the polls until 1973.

Referring to the federal-provincial conference, he said he had planted the seeds of a negative income tax and free trade with the U.S. and is content to cultivate them until they are ready for harvest.

He said the two proposals were new to other premiers. "All of them are interested in a negative income tax," he said, "but the idea is still new to them. They can't see the advantages of giving us some revenues."

Bennett said he was sick at heart to see farms being abandoned on the Prairies and towns being boarded up. He said, "It is not healthy to be driving these people and others from the Maritimes into the slums of the cities when this negative tax would keep them in their homes."

Vancouver Makes First Move

Savage Will Urge Bus Deal Talks

● Hydro electricians hike totals 15.8 per cent. Page 11

Victoria Ald. Clyde Savage said Wednesday he will urge the Capital Regional Board to take immediate steps towards taking over B.C. Hydro's bus operations in Victoria.

Savage, one of four Victoria representatives on the board, was commenting on a decision earlier Wednesday by the Greater Vancouver Regional Board to start negotiations with the provincial government regarding the possible regionalization of the Vancouver bus system.

"It's an excellent idea, and an excellent time to work towards the same end in Victoria," Savage said in an interview.

"I will bring up the matter at next week's regional board meeting," he said.

Savage has taken an interest in Victoria's transportation problems for a number of years.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, told the Colonist he didn't think the board would be able to take "immediate steps" to assume operation of the Victoria area bus system.

"Public transportation and traffic in general are items which the regional board will consider to an increasing extent in the next few years," he said.

"What happens in Vancouver will, of course, be of great interest to us on a smaller scale, but I don't think anything similar will be done here immediately," Curtis said.

Air Crunch May Come By Dec. 31

OTTAWA (CP) — A strike of air traffic controllers could tie up the country's airports as early as Dec. 31 if a conciliation board named Wednesday is unable to settle a contract dispute.

A spokesman for the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association, which represents more than 1,600 key airport workers, said Wednesday the board is scheduled to begin hearings Dec. 10.

It will have two weeks to make a decision, unless an extension is agreed to.

Montreal Rooming House Bomb

Blast Victim Crawls Stairs

MONTREAL (CP) — An explosion, apparently caused by a bomb which was detonated prematurely, damaged a four-storey rooming house and seriously injured a man in his 20s Wednesday.

Police said the man was apparently trying to assemble some dynamite and detonators when the blast occurred on east-end St. Denis Street near De Maisonneuve boulevard.

The injured man was found by a janitor on the second-floor landing of the building moments after the blast and was taken to hospital where he was listed in critical condition.

The police anti-terrorist squad and firemen were rushed to the scene.

When the janitor found the victim, the man had crawled down two flights of stairs and his overalls were still smouldering. The janitor said the man had rented the room Oct. 20.

Doctors at St. Luc Hospital said the 27-year-old man was badly burned and they were operating to restore natural breathing and save his eye sight.

Thai Coup Ends Experiment In Democracy

BANGKOK (AP) — Thailand's experiment with democracy ended Wednesday when Premier Thanom Kittikachorn dissolved parliament, suspended the constitution and assumed absolute power.

Paratroops moved into Bangkok and tanks encircled the parliament building. Despite martial law and police check points in the streets, the capital appeared calm.

Radio Thailand, between patriotic songs, said Thanom would head a revolutionary council with power to decide all civil and military matters.

The council pledged to continue Thailand's foreign policy, which has been strongly anti-communist and pro-U.S. during the Indochina war.

The council said internal domestic strife and a threatening international situation had made the coup necessary.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman, who lost his job, blamed Thanom's decision on "excessive behavior" of members of parliament.

"I take satisfaction in the development," he said. "The only regret I have is that it could not have taken a more evolutionary form.

"Somehow or another we have not mastered the political forms of Europe and America."

Thanom's power move ended the two-year life of parliament and the three-year life of Thailand's constitution. Both were experimental ways of government in Thailand, which was the absolute monarchy of Siam until 1932.

Mother of Four Needs That Little Extra Help

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

Like the day when 34-year-old Kathy left her room a mess, after Darlene had asked her "at least 50 times to clean it up," and 12-year-old Joe came home with a bad report card and then the seven-year-old twins got into a big fight in the middle of the crowded living room.

Darlene is emotionally unstable, and it takes all her strength just to manage a normal routine of life — let alone handle four children in a cramped, run-down apartment in one of the uglier areas of downtown Victoria.

Her husband Jack tries to help her as best he can, and with his easy-going, warm personality, he can give her some of the security she needs.

But now he's worried. He hasn't been able to find work since the last construction project he was on finished a few months ago.

He hopes to get something under the make-work projects planned by the city under the federal incentives program, but that won't be until January.

For Darlene's sake, he needs it now, so she can have the kind of Christmas she really needs: free from worry, a time of happiness and relaxation.

Darlene is under treatment, but it's a long, hard struggle. She feels worst when she can't provide for her family and a bleak Christmas with no special dinner or presents would be another terrible setback for her.

A donation to the Colonist 500 Fund can help people such as Darlene and her family have a happy Christmas.

Contributions to the Fund can be sent to or left at the Colonist, 2631 Douglas Street, or dropped off at Avis Rent-a-Car, 800 Douglas.

Latest donations list appears on Page 3.

Six Killed Instantly In Gas Leak

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Six utility workers suffocated, two others were injured and an entire neighborhood was evacuated Wednesday when a subterranean valve ruptured on a methane gas line under repair in northeast Pittsburgh.

Authorities said the six employees of the Equitable Gas Co. died instantly of "acute methane poisoning" when the gas spewed from the broken valve on a pipeline on which they were working beneath a sidewalk. The two injured workers were not seriously hurt.

Grit Senator Defied Age

Senator Arthur Wentworth Roebuck (L — Ont.), who once said "any talk of old age on this side of 100 is premature," died in Cobourg, Ont., nursing home Wednesday night at 93. His death followed a stroke and heart attack two years ago, but almost to the last, he had perfect hearing, good eyesight and a quick mind. As a child, he lived in Victoria for several years. Spill Could Cost $100 Million for a joint Canada-U.S. contingency plan, the aide-memoire cited a difference of view between the two governments as to the nature and magnitude of oil-tanker movements that should be permitted in the inner waters of the West Coast.

Accordingly, there was no "agreed and workable basis" at present for such a plan.

An appendix said coastal parks on the West Coast of Vancouver Island and in Juan de Fuca Strait as well as the Strait of Georgia would be "extremely vulnerable" to oil spill pollution.

The fishing industry would also suffer heavily, as would the pulp and paper industry, through the contamination of logs.

An analysis of legal considerations found that a Canadian citizen would be unable "in practical terms" to obtain adequate compensation for any damage he suffers from oil pollution.

International law was totally inadequate to meet compensation claims that would arise.

The liability of a shipowner was limited to $7 million per incident, which in many cases would provide only minimal reimbursement for the many potential victims.

Also cited were the legal problems faced by a Canadian pursuring a legal action in a U.S. court, and the difficulty of pressing a claim in a Canadian court for damage that might be caused from pollution on the high seas, before tankers even reach the inland passages.

"The Canadian government is convinced," said the aide-memoire, "that if the full economic costs and the substantial environmental risks are taken into account it will be found desirable to avoid introducing large and hazardous tanker movements into the inner waters of the Pacific coast.

"The Canadian government is concerned, moreover, that there has so far been no indication of plans to provide for compensation, however negligible the risks of damage from oil spills may be judged by U.S. experts."

'I Rob and Rob and Rob' Now, Murder Sentence

NEW YORK (UPI) — By the time he was six years old, George Santiago had perfected his purse-snatching technique. As his attorney described it, he would stand between the cars of a subway train and grab a purse as the train sped away from the station.

Last Nov. 30, at the Nevin Street station in Brooklyn, Santiago reached out from the moving train and grabbed a young woman's purse. But Regina Graham, 20, of Brooklyn, would not let go. Screaming and grappling to keep her purse as the train picked up speed, she stumbled and fell between the cars.

Although the conductor pulled the emergency brake, the train had crushed her legs and pelvis, and Miss Graham died of her injuries 10 days later.

Santiago was arrested by Det. Daniel Hattendorf, a man who first had arrested Santiago for purse-snatching in the subway when he was eight. This week, an all-male jury in Brooklyn Supreme Court found Santiago guilty of murder.

Santiago once told a state psychiatrist, "I rob and I rob and I rob and I rob and the next day I go out and rob again."

The judge ordered Santiago remanded to jail to await sentencing, for which he set no date.

Bus Talks Urged

palities voted Wednesday to go into the transportation business if sufficient funds are available from the provincial government.

The Greater Vancouver board will open negotiations with the provincial government as soon as possible to develop a financial formula, arrange for establishment of a regional transit authority and a takeover of B.C. Hydro bus operations in Greater Vancouver.

Savage said whether or not Greater Victoria would eventually follow Vancouver's example depended on the type of support offered by the provincial government.

"In the past, the financial help offered by the government, was only on a short-term basis. If the province agreed to help us run the transit system on a regional basis for a longer period of time, I think we shouldn't hesitate to go ahead," Savage said.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's a great opportunity," he added.

Savage's enthusiasm appeared to be based on the hope that the provincial government would offer better financial inducements for a regional take-over than it has in the past.

In February, Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan, one of two cabinet ministers who sit as directors of B.C. Hydro, told the Legislature the government was interested in granting the Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver areas a degree of autonomy and some financial assistance if they took over transit operations.

He said there would be a continuing provincial subsidy of not less than $2 million per year in support of urban transit operations, and a further subsidy from Hydro of about $3 million per year.

The regional representatives in both areas would be granted the right to set fares, extension or limitation of services, and govern all related matters themselves, Kiernan said at the time.

In return, the government would require the regional bodies to share half of the annual deficit of operation, after the estimated $5 million subsidy had been deducted.

The two regions could be handled regionally in computing costs. The proposal at that time was attacked by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett and Liberal Leader Pat McGeer, and drew a cool response from Victoria area municipal leaders.

Mayor Courtney Haddock of Victoria said then: "There is just no way Victoria will pay for new deficits in the bus system . . . If the government will guarantee the losses, period, that's a different matter."

Kiernan could not be reached for comment by the Colonist Wednesday night on whether the government might consider liberalizing its February proposal.

'Free' Flag Costs $60.75

OTTAWA (CP) — With pride, Senator Edward Lawson described Wednesday the 12-foot American-made Canadian flag he was presented with after attending a recent labor convention in the U.S.

That convention wouldn't start until they had such a flag, Senator Lawson (Ind — British Columbia), an international vice-president of the Teamsters Union from Vancouver, told the senate.

The was a commentary on the current debate about anti-Americanism, he suggested.

There was one kicker: Canadian duty on the flag was $60.75, which he paid.

Problem in Puberty

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter, 13, has diabetes and is under monthly supervision by a specialist in the disease. It is well controlled, but as usual there are families and friends who think they know more about it than the doctor. Would you discuss:

A girl who has not menstruated, yet is often difficult to control in diabetes until after she has.

Why is it that grandparents refuse to discuss the disease, or even whether there is any in the family? We are still at a loss to find any relative on either side who ever had it.

One of my children was told in school that my daughter had to inherit it from some other female in the family, and could not inherit it from a male.—Mrs. Y.Y.Y.

Okay, there you are with some brand new initials.

Why people refuse to accept facts is not easy to explain. All I can say is that it happens with diseases other than diabetes: epilepsy, cystic fibrosis, muscular dystrophy. Among older people, some refuse to admit that there's such a thing as cancer. It's a supersititious hangover I suspect, from the days when people were inclined to blame anything bad on something a person "must have done to be punished." Nonsense, of course, but there it is.

Diabetes is often difficult to control during puberty because the glandular system is in a turmoil with the approach of menstruation and other aspects of maturity.

Once you've weathered that growing-up time and the body's functions have stabilized, the diabetes usually is much eqsier to control.

The young diabetic, however, has to learn how to meet other problems. How, for example, to cope with the question of NOT having a hamburger when the rest of the crowd decides to. After all, there is no outward, visible sign of diabetes. You can't tell a person has it by looking at him. How does the youngster explain being "different" without a long explanation? It takes some doing! Your dietician can explain what snacks are permissible on such occasions so that your daughter does not have to appear different.

As to heredity, somebody once said that a diabetic plum could be found in most family trees. Some ancestor could have had mild diabetes that never was recognized. Maybe several. It's nobody's "fault."

Would Hit Exports, Jobs

U.S. Export Bill Blow to Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate Wednesday voted approval of the DISC proposal, a scheme Canada has said could hurt her export business and also add to Canadian unemployment.

Approval came as the Senate voted 59 to 28 against an amendment that would have knocked the Domestic International Sales Corporation idea out of the bill now under debate and replaced it with a more moderate idea.

The amendment, proposed by Senator Fred Harris (Dem. — Okla.) would have carried little or no threat to Canada.

Canadian officials have said the plan as now written could harm Canada by encouraging U.S. exporters to export heavily to Canada and give the U.S. an edge in markets where the U.S. and Canada compete.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson of Canada has said that in influencing the relocation home of U.S. plants now operating in Canada, the plan could lead to a massive exodus of manufacturing jobs from Canada.

Harris and other U.S. critics have charged that the DISC plan, under which firms manufacturing for export could defer tax payments on much of their income, amounts to a billion-dollar tax loophole for business.

His plan also would have encouraged subsidiaries to relocate back to the U.S. and employ Americans, but would have removed what DISC critics term a tax bonanza for big business.

Since the DISC plan was not included in the House of Representatives version of the tax bill it will come up for discussion at a House-Senate conference to reach a compromise on the two versions.

The compromise tax bill must be approved by both chambers and signed by President Nixon before it becomes law.

No 'Negotiation' In Trade Talks

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada's defence production sharing agreement is one of the subjects being discussed by U.S. and Canadian officials, a spokesman for the department of industry, trade and commerce said Wednesday.

The spokesman said there were no "negotiations" taking place, but the subject was one being discussed along with the automobile agreement, oil exports, and other bilateral interests between Canada and the United States.

Since Aug. 15, when President Nixon announced the 10 per cent import surcharge on $2.5 billion worth of Canadian manufactured goods flowing into the United States, Canadian and American officials have been meeting to discuss the trade situation.

The last meeting, held in Ottawa, covered many subjects, including the defence production sharing agreement of 1959 which provides for the United States to purchase as much defence equipment from Canada as Canada buys from the United States.

The agreement has worked to the advantage of Canadians in the past few years because the United States has needed a considerable amount of military equipment due to its involvement in Vietnam, while Canada has been scaling down its military activity.

Rhodesian Settlement

Britain Planning Sellout African Leaders Charge

SALISBURY (UPI) — African leaders Wednesday accused Britain of planning to sell out the interests of 5 million Africans in exchange for a settlement of its six-year dispute with Rhodesia over independence declared by the former British colony.

The Africans, formerly detained leaders of the outlawed Zimbabwe African People's Union and Zimbabwe African National Union, called for Rhodesia's return to British rule as a prelude to any settlement.

"It is the intention of Her Majesty's government to sell the 5 million Africans to the aspirations of the less than one quarter million white inhabitants of this country," the nationalists said in a memorandum handed to British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

"Rhodesia should revert to the crown as part of a settlement," the memorandum said.

Sir Alec conferred Wednesday, the third day of his visit to Salisbury for talks on the likelihood of a settlement, with Cephas Msiha, formerly of ZAPU, and Michael Mawema and Edson Sithole, formerly of ZANU.

"We must point out that although it is often said that Africans have suffered more that Europeans from sanctions, Africans fully support sanctions," the memorandum said. "Their only disappointment in this regard is that her majesty's government has not vigorously campaigned for a total trade boycott of Rhodesia."

Nixon Signature Breaks Sanctions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed legislation Wednesday permitting the United States to import chrome ore from Rhodesia in a direct violation of United Nations sanctions against the all-white African government.

The UN sanction was applied after the Rhodesian government split away from the Commonwealth in 1965, and forced the United States to rely on the Soviet Union for about 60 per cent of its chrome ore.

A Leak to Be Plugged

THE CONFUSION, CONTRADICTION and evasion surrounding the premature release of recommendations dealing with control of foreign investment in this country indicate not only an alarming weakness in cabinet-level security but a curious lack of decision, or plain incompetence, on the part of this administration.

Last Saturday Canadian Forum magazine published what purported to be recommendations in a cabinet study for creation of an agency with broad policing powers to control foreign investment and allow home-owned enterprises opportunity for more effective competition.

In response, the office of the prime minister said the cabinet is "still discussing policy proposals on the foreign ownership of Canadian industry." It acknowledged the Forum's report was based on "one draft" of a study prepared for the cabinet. This was the evasion.

On Tuesday, Southam newspapers reported that "despite government denials a confidential privy council document reveals that the Trudeau government has decided on the creation of a screening agency" as a vital part of apparatus to control foreign ownership.

"Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp," the release continued, "denied Monday the government had made any major decisions on the recommendations of the Gray (Revenue Minister Herb Gray) report on foreign ownership."

The denial, it appeared, was not supported by the fact that a confidential privy council document was in the authors' possession, and which they quoted chapter and verse.

In the face of this evidence, Mr. Sharp told the House of Commons the government had, in effect, given approval in principle to a system of policing foreign takeovers of Canadian industry. And he went on to confirm the details of the newspaper account, the truth of which no one was any longer in a position to deny. Here was the contradiction.

The emphasis now is on the cabinet leak rather than cabinet evasiveness, but both aspects of this case are important to the people of Canada. Any lack of integrity at privy council level is intolerable. But so is a silly dodging of honest answers to responsible questions.

It took a dynamite blast to alert the House of Commons to its vulnerable state, and somebody jumping on Mr. Kosygin's back to convince Mr. Trudeau he had been altogether too casual in his security arrangements.

In the present case, whether secrecy was really necessary or not is immaterial. The fact that security was penetrated — apparently by two independently operating agencies — is the alarming feature. It calls for something more than shoving a finger in the dyke.

Now It Is Being Told

A REAL EYE-OPENER is a report soon to be placed before the General Assembly of the United Nations on the economic and social consequences of military expenditures. It was prepared by 14 experts in various fields specially for the world body, and it could well be the most important document ever to have been submitted.

It presents the massive spending on armament in a new light. While the sums still are virtually beyond comprehension they are so vast, a comparison with expenditures on social needs brings things down to an understandable level in a story that has needed to be told bluntly for a long time.

The report magnifies the point that was made in an article on this page the other day from Washington in which political analyst Marquis Childs dealt with the nuclear arms race. He foresaw bankruptcy or total devastation as "the pursuit of ever more fantastic and wholesale killing devices goes on."

In the 1960s, the report points out, the total world expenditure on arms was nearly $1,900,000 million. Total outlay for the present decade could be $750,000 million more than that.

How much is that?

It is two and a half times what all governments spend on health.

Or the total expenditure can be described in this way: it is running at one and a half times what is being spent by all governments on education.

And from another angle: 30 times more than the total official economic aid being supplied by developed countries to developing ones.

Or: it represents between 6 and 6.5 per cent of the total world gross national product.

Listed are six countries chiefly responsible for the huge expenditure: the United States, the Soviet Union, China, France, Great Britain and West Germany. They account for four-fifths of the total and, says the report, they "dominate and, indeed, largely determine the world trend."

The rate of growth of military spending is appreciably faster among the developing nations than the world average, it is pointed out. Against a world rise of about 3 to 4 per cent a year, armament expenditures in the developing countries have been increasing at the rate of about 7 per cent a year, and the observation is made:

"When the needs of economic development are so pressing, it is a disturbing thought that these countries should have found it necessary to increase their military spending so speedily, particularly when their per capita income is so low."

A further observation, and one that must become implanted deeply in the heart of the United Nations, is that the arms race sharpens political differences, slows international trade and contributes greatly to serious imbalances in international payments.

In short, the spending makes more acute the international tensions to which it relates.

Ottawa Offbeat

Liberals Under Liberal Attack

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

HEY, what's going on? Liberals lashing the Liberal government, that's what.

In the Senate, Liberals warning Liberals in the Commons — where Liberal policies are made — that the public opinion polls are correct; their government IS losing the support of the taxpayers.

If it were Conservatives publicly feuding and putting it all on the record, well . . . haven't they almost always?

Or if the New Dems were rowing, as they historically have done, more recently and spectacularly with their way-out leftist waffliers wildly whacking at what they laughingly call their Centre and Right, well . . . what else is not new?

* * *

But Liberals!

Always so obsessed with the "team" spirit in victory and defeat alike, they all stick together like unpoured glue in the pot.

First there was Quebec Eastern Townships Senator Paul Desruisseaux.

He started the Liberal breast-beating by initiating a still continuing debate on the parlous state of the economy.

"Our government," he told the Senate, "is losing the confidence of Canadians.

"Our government . . . should immediately pull back from continuous attempts to force business and industry to meet the political and social objectives of government.

* * *

"Prime purpose of the private sector of the economy is to generate growth with its accompanying employment.

"Government attempts to make it a vehicle for political ambitions will, in the end, destroy it."

Then on came Toronto Senator Daniel Lang, former treasurer and campaign chairman for the federal Liberals in Ontario and fund-raiser in chief for former prime minister Lester Pearson.

A card-carrying Liberal if there ever was one. But you should have heard Senator Lang lay it on them.

The words of Senator Desruisseaux had been "strong words," allowed Senator Lang, but with them, "I concur."

* * *

Then he addressed himself to the task of documenting his concurrence, filing this bill of complaint against the administration he has supported with work, dedication and money.

His charge: the Trudeau government had alienated the business, financial, industrial and commercial community with its fantastically complicated tax legislation; Bryce Mackasey's labor laws and Ronald Basford's competition regulations; its new buddy-buddy relationship with the Soviet and its "careless and inconsistent relations with the U.S."

It was widely believed, Senator Lang lamented, that government "neither understands nor cares about the private sector of the economy" . . . because, as former trade minister C. D. Howe once said, the bureaucrats "never had to make a payroll!"

* * *

Worse, went on Senator Lang, the business, financial and industrial community was "fearful" of the increasing power of the bureaucracy which it saw as "aloof, intransigent, doctrinaire and often hostile."

Worst of all, warned Senator Lang, was the damage the changing Liberal foreign policy could do, in courting Moscow while cool-shouldering Washington.

* * *

Senator Lang saw Liberal talk of a great trade boom with the Soviet as, well, bunk.

Canada and the Soviet Union were competitive rather than complementary in their economies, he argued, but even if they weren't, and trade did boom, who could use "inconvertible rubles?"

In attacking the U.S. on his Canadian tour, Premier Kosygin was charged by Senator Lang with "an overt attempt to further drive the wedge between Ottawa and Washington.

"And with friends like that, who needs enemies?" he asked.

The government's new tax legislation he dismissed as such a "technocratic and bureaucratic foofarow," with its multiplicity of sections and sub-sections, that even Finance Minister Benson couldn't find his way through it.

The result of the finance minister getting lost in a daze in the tax maze was that to the hundreds of amendments already proposed, Mr. Benson was bringing in 40 more pages of "further amendments and amendments amending the amendments."

When business and industry had to "travel light, fast and be flexible" to keep Canada working, his own government, protested this Liberal senator, was "encumbering, burdening, and hobbling it with incomprehensible legislation" and a frightening foreign policy.

Core Needed

WHILE I am a brand new Victoria citizen who does not as yet possess a vote, I have visited Victoria a great many times in the past years, and I have been a Colonist subscriber for six years.

Through your excellent media I have been aware of the Reid proposal for several years. I was fortunate enough to attend a luncheon at which he spoke. I was deeply impressed by Mr. Reid's sincerity. He delivered a softly spoken, straight from the shoulder, honest message. I am convinced his proposal is what is needed to start the Old Town concept of rejuvenating some old but worthy buildings.

No one in his right mind is going to, on his own or with some municipal help, take an old building and, retaining the four walls, rip out the entire interior, rebuild the interior and roof, put in an elevator, restore the front, and then start looking for tenants so that the capital investment will, in 50 years, be returned. At least, I don't hear any of the "no-nos" of the Reid proposal putting up any dollars for their alternative plan. What plan? The Reid proposal is the core needed to start developing a nice, red, juicy apple of Inner Harbor development.

It is ridiculous to state that if one highrise goes up there will be 50 of them in a hundred years. Those who quote statistics to show that a highrise is not profitable to the city quote out of true context. When there are dozens of highrises in a confined area, there is always the straw that breaks the camel's back — one too many makes most of them unprofitable to a city due to increased traffic and sewage costs at that point.

The Reid development will give me a fine view of the Inner Harbor and set off developments worth looking at. As things are now, I can't see anything, unless from a highrise 10 blocks away. And what a view!

A park in this area would have a very limited annual use. The Reid development seems to have ample green areas.

The Old Town talk is nice, but it is not a plan, it is a concept. A plan involves full details on dollar investment, the principals, and the estimated number of years until the investment is returned.

Believe me, Mr. Reid did not threaten the city with plans to build a box-like building. He was pleading to be allowed not to be forced into said type of building.

It is very reasonable to believe that once the Reid development is started then the smaller investors will seize the opportunity to pick up an old building here and there and invest in the harbor development.

Citizens of Victoria, there just isn't any apple without a core.

Harmony

We often hear the expression at nominating conventions, "He's a fighter."

Personaly, after reading various accounts of "fighters" in municipal, civic and provincial affairs I would now be inclined to favor a candidate that was credited with intelligence, personality and equanimity.

There is not a reason in the world why a gathering of intelligent people cannot forgo personal animosities and carry on the people's business for which they allowed themselves to be elected. One pugnacious individual lacking in creative thinking, yet with a critical eye for personal publicity, can completely upset the decorum of any council meeting.

Civic and municipal elections are near at hand. Now is the time to decide upon the merits and qualifications of the candidates. Let us choose only those capable of working in harmony in the administration of our affairs and forego the "fighter" in favor of conscientious intelligence.

ARCHIE M. BROWNE,
1165 Meares St.,
Victoria.

Just a Start

I see from the Colonist that Mr. J. A. Reid is now using blackmail to get permission for his project on Victoria's harbor. By threatening to build what he calls "a ghastly box" if he is not given permission to go ahead with his towers, etc., he eventually expects to have the city council throw up their hands and say "All right, do just what you like."

Is our city council so weak that it will be influenced by this threat? Whose city is this anyway? Why should a company in Vancouver think it can come in and as Mr. Reid says, "teach us a lesson"? Even if the Reid plan as it stands is not approved, would the council give permission for a "ghastly box"?

I wish I had been aware of the meeting at the Empress; I would have attended it and I certainly would NOT have stood up at the bidding of a real estate official. One of the most unfortunate results of this kind of so-called "development" is that as soon as one contractor gets permission to do what he wants there are dozens of others all clamoring for permission to do likewise and make their share of the almighty dollar. Before you know where you are, Victoria's waterfront will look like the picture of English Bay on the back cover of our Victoria phone directory.

On the Hourglass TV program I saw Mr. Reid being interviewed. He referred to some of our old buildings as ugly. Can anyone really say that the average highrise building (and they are almost identical in any large city in the world) are beautiful. Mr. Reid's towers are just as bad except that they are circular instead of square or oblong.

I agree that our harbor probably does need some development but not with a project intended mainly for the wealthy to live in. A park-like area with trees and spring flowers would be so much more suitable and could be enjoyed by all.

DISGUSTED

I Beg to Differ

Is Nothing to Be Spared?

By FRANK LOWE
from Montreal

WHILE I realize that pollution, or fighting pollution, is the in thing these days and people who didn't know the difference between ecology and ichthyology a few years ago are now lecturing on how to preserve our environment, I do think that the nature lovers can occasionally go too far.

The other day, for instance, I read this announcement:

"At this time of year, when leaves continue to fall and accumulate in temptingly burnable bundles, STOP (Society to Overcome Pollution) cautions us to resist that urge to ignite those bundles, even though the smell of burning leaves evokes nostalgic childhood memories of by-gone bonfires.

"While this pleasant (to some of us at least) smell of burning leaves may be more acceptable to the olfactory sense than other forms of everyday pollution, it is, nevertheless, pollution.

"It has been reported that inhaling smoke from burning leaves may well be more harmful than inhaling from cigarettes. In addition, particulate levels in the air are increased by burning materials."

* * *

Well, I wonder if people who go around burning old nostalgia down realize they, too, are creating their own form of pollution? I mean, is nothing to be spared the crusader's sword?

Fairly soon, if this sort of thing goes on, the man sitting in his own backyard enjoying a quiet cigarette will be arrested — "for his own good," of course.

Now, I am in favor of cleaning up our air and water and protecting what we have left of our flora and fauna. But let's not lose our collective heads.

Not many people in the nasty, polluted old city are going to gather bundles of fallen leaves to burn and so assault something known as "the olfactory sense." Mainly because they don't have any leaves and if they did they would have no place in which to burn them.

* * *

But in our small towns and villages, there should be still a place for a few piles of burning leaves. Surely these small, smouldering gestures to a once-loved day would not increase "particulate levels in the air" to intolerable levels.

I don't know about you, but on these frosty evenings as I head for home in the city, there is something I miss. Then, when I think about it, I realize what it is.

It is the smell of burning leaves — autumn's requiem.

Before anyone begins to harbor the suspicion that I am some kind of a pyromaniac sneaking around searching for fallen leaves to set ablaze, let me explain.

This warning from STOP about the dangers in burning leaves — while satisfying our olfactory sense we may be encouraging lung cancer and upping our particulate levels — is indicative of what is wrong with our age.

* * *

It is an age of extremes. We really don't want equality. We want superiority. We don't want equal pay. We want more pay.

We don't want to stop pollution. We want to regulate.

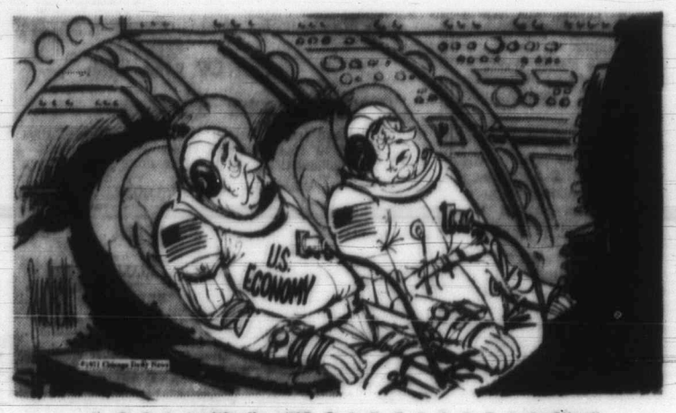
In other words, when we get on to a good thing we really don't know when to stop.

I personally doubt that if all the leaves burned in all of Canada this fall would create pollution equal to that caused by one medium-size steel mill.

When that is weighed against the fact that many people enjoy setting a match to a pile of fallen leaves, and many others enjoy having their memories stirred as the scent of the burning leaves drifts through the crisp, still air, I figure that the warning against burning leaves is a mite extreme.

Such tactics, or so I believe, actually harm causes such as the fight against pollution. People who might be willing to acknowledge that raw sewage flowing into a river is not a good thing are apt to think groups who get upset about burning leaves aren't too bright.

I suggest we use our anti-pollution guns to shoot down real killers. A pile of burning leaves doesn't frighten me very much.



"—3, 2, 1, ignition" — "10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, ignition" — "10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4 . . ."

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The first operation of standard time in North America began at midnight 88 years ago tonight in 1883 in eastern Nova Scotia. Scottish-born Sir Sandford Fleming, who came to Canada in 1845, probably had more to do with the introduction of standard time around the world than anyone else. He first publicly proposed the international standard time measurement at Toronto in 1879.

1959 — The Board of Broadcast Governors announced the regulations governing television broadcasting.

1929 — A 15-foot tidal wave struck part of Newfoundland's southwest coast, killing 27 persons and causing $1 million damage.

1918 — The last homeward-bound German troops crossed the French frontier.

1883 — The United States was officially divided into four time zones.

1776 — The United States rebel army retreated from Fort Lee, N.J.

OPINION

East Bengal Situation Poses Insoluble Problem for Indira Gandhi

Desperation May Drive India and Pakistan to War

By ROBERT S. ELEGANT, from London

It is a truism established beyond any reasonable doubt that war never really solves international problems, but usually creates greater problems.

War can, however, solve personal and political problems of statesmen who have blundered into a blind alley from which they can escape only by force. At least, the new problems of war are different from the old, insoluble problems.

It is more than likely that India and Pakistan will go to war in that spirit of desperation.

The festering enmity between the two nations created when British India was divided has, once again, come to a head over heavily populated East Bengal, Pakistan's eastern "wing," separated by 1,100 miles of Indian territory from West Pakistan.

It is also likely that India, which has the much better moral and practical case, will feel compelled to start the war.

* * *

The historical roots of the present low-level conflict, which could erupt into conventional war, go back 500 years to the Moslem conquest of predominantly Hindu India.

Antipathy between Moslems and Hindus much later made expedient the partition of the subcontinent into two nations, but the direct causes of the likely war are much more immediate.

Earlier this year, Pakistan held a general election. It was a fair election, and it produced an overwhelming majority in Pakistan's parliament for East Bengal.

But the man who should have become prime minister of Pakistan through the democratic process, Sheik Mujibur Rahman, was committed to virtual autonomy for East Bengal.

* * *

The most populous area of Pakistan has been systematically exploited, economically and politically, by the West Pakistanis, who hold decisive military power.

The West Pakistanis were absolutely opposed to a virtual secession which could have destroyed their Islamic republic. They, therefore, declared the election null and void and began brutally suppressing East Bengali nationalism.

Gandhi

In the name of Bengla Desh, Free Bengal, a powerful resistance movement sprang up among East Bengalis who are radically different from West Pakistanis in race, culture, language and way of life.

* * *

The two "wings" are actually united only by the common adherence of their peoples to Islam. But the casual Islam of East Bengal is quite different from the orthodox Islam of West Pakistan, which maintains the austere traditions of the religion's Middle Eastern origins.

The non-martial, artistically inclined East Bengalis have mounted surprisingly effective resistance to "pacification" by their traditionally warlike West Pakistani overlords.

Initially, India enjoyed the discomfiture of her enemy. But, as suppression and resistance became more intense, East Bengalis began fleeing civil war, disease and famine.

Between nine million and 10 million refugees have settled under miserable conditions among their cultural and racial brothers in India's Bengal province.

* * *

India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is deeply disturbed by the folk-migration into a poor and dissident province of her own nation.

She has unsuccessfully sought UN condemnation of West Pakistan's brutality. The UN convention on genocide almost certainly applies to the East Bengal situation. But the United Nations proved as unwilling to act as it was incapable of effective action.

* * *

India, therefore, faces an apparently insoluble problem. The refugees will not return to East Bengal until West Pakistan guarantees the region substantial autonomy.

They reckon, quite correctly, that returning to the present turmoil would mean accepting total insecurity — and, probably, death or extreme hardship amid continuing fighting.

But India cannot indefinitely support nearly 10 million East Bengalis. Her own economic and political problems would threaten the existence of a united India even if the East Bengal imbroglio did not exist.

* * *

The only way out could be war to force West Pakistan to change its attitude. Their past actions indicate that the Indians are likely to start the fighting. India has consistently proved ready to use force to attain national objectives or to solve otherwise insoluble problems on her borders.

The fabulously rich Moslem Nizam of Hyderabad in central India was thwarted by Indian troops when he asserted his legal right to join Pakistan — rather than India, as his predominantly Hindu subjects wished.

India marched into Kashmir when the Hindu maharajah opted to join India — and both his predominantly Moslem subjects and Pakistan objected.

India took the Portuguese enclave of Goa by force, and Indian troops were as much responsible as China's People's Liberation Army for fighting in the Himalayas in 1962.

Given that record and Mrs. Gandhi's recent strong statements, war is an immiment possibility. War could solve — or, at least, alter — the politician's predicament. War could not benefit either East Bengal in general or the Bengali refugees in particular.

The consequent desolation, disease and famine are, rather, certain to make all East Bengalis' plight worse. No one stands to gain from war between India and Pakistan. But the East Bengalis, for whose benefit the war would presumably be fought, stand to lose most.

Nixon Uses UN To Solve Own Problem?

By STEPHEN SCOTT, from United Nations

United States President Richard Nixon appears to be using the United Nations as a whipping boy as he attempts to cope with a difficult situation in Washington.

That seems the only interpretation of a surprising statement issued by U.S. Ambassador George Bush Tuesday night commenting on the speech given in the general assembly 24 hours previously by Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua of China.

The statement mentioned the "intemperate language" of the first Chinese speech here since being admitted to the UN and added:

"What is surprising — and disturbing — was the decision to launch participation in this world body by firing these empty cannons of rhetoric."

The statement astonished some observers. The consensus among experts — even some China hands brought over from Hong Kong by the U.S. — was that the Chinese speech was a tough restatement of known positions. It was, most believe, temperate — not intemperate.

An informed Western observer told correspondents that there was nothing unexpected in the Chiao speech adding: "Surprises were in store only for those who hoped to be surprised."

Even Bush said immediately after the speech only that it was a forceful and not surprising restatement of positions that the U.S. could not support.

Then 24 hours later, after talking to officials during a visit to Washington, he issued the formal statement.

The Chiao statement was completely clear of the usual Chinese propaganda insults such as "running dogs of imperialism." Observers said that in some respects it came down harder on the Soviet Union than on the U.S.

The main point Chiao made was that China does not believe that the superpowers should run the world or the UN.

He did demand U.S. troop evacuation of Southeast Asia, Taiwan and South Korea and make some other anti-American statements, but only in the most matter-of-fact manner. It could hardly be expected that a communist speaker would not make these points.

Opportunity Missed

Then too, the Chinese let pass a marvellous chance to slam the U.S. Tuesday when they joined 105 other countries in a demand that President Nixon not approve legislation passed by congress which calls for the importation of Rhodesian chrome, which is banned by a security council embargo.

Never have so many countries voted against the U.S. on a resolution here and it was a perfect opening for a Chinese diatribe. But Ambassador Huang Hua contented himself with saying only the resolution was in line with Chinese policy.

The reason for the statement seems to be that Nixon is protecting his rear from the conservatives in Washington at a difficult time when he is attempting to get foreign aid through congress and planning his visit to Peking.

Conservatives have been unhappy at the way things have been going here since before the fateful Oct. 25 voting in which the People's Republic of China was admitted to membership and the U.S. two-China proposals were defeated.

Apparently Nixon was thinking of this conservative feeling when the White House issued a statement Oct. 26 criticizing the behavior of some delegations after the voting.

This statement is said to have helped influence the defeat of his foreign aid bill in Congress.

He seems to want to check conservative criticism before it gets strong enough to make passage of aid legislation in congress more difficult and before it can influence public opinion to the degree that his trip to Peking will be difficult.

West Germans Fear Soviet Subversion

By ALAN DEAN, from Bonn

West German politicians fear that continued subversion by Soviet agents throughout the country will reach a crucial point within the next 18 months. Richard Gerken, former chief of counter-espionage in the West German Office for State Security, estimates there are 16,000 Soviet and other communist agents operating in his country at any given time. Last year 768 were uncovered.

At a recent CSU conference in Munich the chairman of the Christian Social Union forecast a possible massive Russian intervention in West Germany's 1973 electoral campaign by means of propaganda and intimidation.

It is pointed out by observers that many left-wing followers of Chancellor Willy Brandt's ruling Social Democratic Party are siding more and more with members of the German Communist Party (DKP) which was reborn two years ago in West Germany in place of the banned Communist Party of Germany (KPD).

The aim of the Dusseldorf-based DKP is the same as that of its counterpart in East Germany: 'to bring a union of the two German states and a united, democratic and socialist Germany."

The West German Communists claim 53,000 members, with a monthly rise of 500. Eight per cent of these are students. They also claim that they are especially strong in some 240 large and medium-sized plants, mainly in the chemical and engineering industries.

Radical Experiment in Public Transportation

Town Designed for Buses

By JEREMY BUGLER, from London

A radical experiment in public transport has just begun in the north of England. A whole town has been designed around a "busway" — a system of roads reserved for buses only. The scheme is being closely watched by urban planners in many countries.

Runcorn New Town, rising next to the old town of Runcorn beside the Mersey River estuary, is traversed today by two kinds of buses: the regional buses coming in from outlying areas, which have to use the ordinary roads — and the busway buses.

The latter travel on the busway at speeds twice as fast as ordinary bus services. They don't have to contend with traffic jams or even traffic lights. Where the busway crosses an ordinary road, special lights automatically give the buses preference.

* * *

The busway, at first sight an ordinary two-way road, has had a bearing on the design of practically every part of the new town. It traces a seven-mile-long figure-of-eight pattern, linking housing areas and industrial estates, schools and parks. At its core is 'shopping city,' a huge shopping precinct under one roof which was opened to the public recently.

Everything is done to encourage people to hop on a bus. In most cases bus stops are closer to factory gates than car parks. Motorists have to use car parking areas outside the factories — company parks are not allowed. In residential areas, cars and people are segregated. Cars usually cannot run to the front doors of individual houses, but have to be parked a short walk away. The man who comes back from work in a bus is not worse off than his motoring neighbor.

The estates have been laid out so that even the extreme edges are not more than 500 yards or five minutes' walk away from a bus stop — and usually much closer.

So far, only a section of the new town housing has been built. But the planners were determined to have the busway at the start.

"We felt that unless it was a basis for the new town, and unless it worked from the word go, it wouldn't have got off the ground," says Ken Wight, leader of the busway project team. "It will be 10 years before it is operating at full stretch, when buses will run at six-minute intervals over 12 miles of busway. But because we've got seven miles open now, in the right places, we have a good chance of getting most people to use the bus to go to work and leave the car at home.

* * *

"Most of the traffic problems in a town like this would be caused by journeys to work," says Wight. "We hope that if even half the population takes a bus to work, the busway will have proved itself."

The master plan for the New Runcorn was produced in 1967 by Arthur Ling. He had alternative transport systems costed, from monorails to tramways and computer-controlled automatic systems on concrete rails. It was found that the humble single-deck bus was the best system; it cost only a fifth as much as its closest rival.

Last year, the British ministry of transport gave the busway its blessing, in the form of an agreement to pay three-quarters of its cost.

The people of New Runcorn seem pleased with the regularity and speed of the buses. Runcorn's planners themselves see the busway as a gesture of confidence in public transport. "If this system does not work, then it is difficult to envisage circumstances under which public transport can work," says Runcorn Development Corporation's general manager, Derick Banwell.

Foreign Capital 'Less Worrisome'

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians are not as anxious now as they might have been six months ago to restrict the entry of foreign capital, Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday night.

He said at a news conference there is much greater circumspection about the degree of toughness with which Canadians want to treat foreign capital.

Trudeau said his government has not yet reached a total decision on foreign investment in Canada but dropped a hint that this decision will be announced in six weeks.

The prime minister said foreign investment was touched on at the three-day federal-provincial economic conference. But there had been substantial disagreement about establishment of a screening board to oversee foreign investment projects.

Trudeau maintained that agreement was reached between the provinces and Ottawa in many areas. He said a reporter's suggestion that nothing was achieved was contrary to the facts.

The prime minister asserted that Ottawa had not said no to Ontario or any other province on the possibility of opting out of shared-cost programs.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed told reporters Ottawa has agreed to take a second look at opting-out policy, which now applies only in Quebec, so that it might apply in other provinces.

Trudeau said the timing of the announcement on foreign ownership policy will be part of the decision itself.

The July 29 cabinet decision approving in principle establishment of a screening board was only one step in an over-all decision.

This matter was being looked at again now that the cabinet was back on the subject. There would not be "half-taken decisions on parts of subjects."

Trudeau said circumspection about restricting foreign investment has grown since the Aug. 15 U.S. surtax on imports and high unemployment in Canada.

People were more concerned about jobs than with keeping foreign capital out of Canada.

Trudeau said the U.S. import surtax has not hurt Canada as badly as had been feared in late August.

But this assumed the surtax would not be permanent.

The conference originally was scheduled for December but was moved ahead a month after some provinces and federal opposition parties called for an earlier discussion of economic problems in view of increasing unemployment.

Most of the three-day conference was taken up discussing division of revenues between the federal government and the provinces, with the provinces generally criticizing federal proposals to change the tax system, shared-cost programs and the system of subsidies to poorer provinces. The criticism came from several different areas, with the provinces seriously divided among themselves.

Both federal and provincial leaders said they had expected no major decisions or policy changes at the conference, describing it as an opportunity for consultation and frank exchanges of views.

Although proceedings were closed, no government appeared reluctant to make its case known to the press. There was no avalanche of policy statements during the three days.

Highlighting the final day was an apparent softening of the federal proposal to place limits on spending on shared-cost health programs. The federal plan would have limited increases in federal contributions to the increase in the gross national product. The federal government now pays 50 per cent of the cost.

Health Minister John Munro told reporters the federal government would negotiate with the provinces over the next three weeks and consider any suggestions from them for an alternate cost-ceiling formula.

He emphasized that the premiers agreed with the federal desire for a more flexible health program and more effective use of money spent on health. They were "not enthusiastic" about the specific federal formula, he admitted, but a meeting of health ministers could work out the details. The federal government, however, had not abandoned its proposal.

Criticism of the cost ceiling tied to the GNP came from almost every province, in varying degrees.

W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, who says equalization payments should be replaced with a guaranteed income for individuals, said in an interview Wednesday Quebec should not be considered a "have-not" province since it is rich in natural resources.

Ignores Quit-Vietnam Provision

Nixon Defies Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon declared Wednesday that he would disregard a provision in a big military weapons bill calling on him to set a firm date for complete American withdrawal from Vietnam.

The president's declaration, made as he signed the $21.3 billion bill, angered Senate war critics and prompted them to renew their efforts to legislate an end to the U.S. role in Vietnam.

But a few hours later the House decisively rejected an antiwar amendment to a $71-billion defence appropriation bill that would cut off all funds for the war after June 1, conditioned solely on release of all U.S. prisoners of war. The house vote was 238 to 164.

The House then passed the bill and sent it to the Senate.

The House amendment was introduced by Rep. Edward Boland, (D—Mass.), who was cheered when he declared it was "incomprehensible and indefensible" that Nixon would disregard the antiwar measure which Congress wrote into the weapons procurement bill.

"It appears to me we had to do it (cut off funds) now," said Boland. "It's the only way we are going to stop this war."

In signing the military procurement bill, which authorizes money for such weapons as the safeguard antiballistic missile system, Nixon said he would disregard the Mansfield amendment" which asks the president to set a final withdrawal date subject only to the release of American prisoners of war and an accounting for those missing in action.

Senator Who Wouldn't Quit Succumbs to Bitterest Foe

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Senator Arthur Wentworth Roebuck, long an opponent of anything connected with age limits, died at a nursing home here Wednesday. He was 93.

Roebuck, who had been in the Senate since 1945 and for a time lived in Victoria, once said that "any talk of old age on this side of 100 is premature."

Almost to the last, he had perfect hearing, good eyesight and a quick mind. He had looked forward to celebrating his 100th birthday with his senatorial colleagues and confidelity issued invitations to his 91st birthday party to those of them who would be in "good health."

The senator had been in failing health since he suffered a stroke and heart attack two years ago. He was recently released from hospital in Toronto and came to the nursing home in this town 25 miles southeast of Peterborough.

Roebuck did not oppose reform of the Senate as such, but he said the government bill that became law in 1965 forcing senators appointed after its enactment to retire at 75 was a "brutal thing."

He was 87 then and refused to retire. Senators were originally appointed for life.

He said at the time: "I can't think of anything more horrible than being deprived of your value.

"People put in that position don't live long."

Arthur Wentworth Roebuck was born in Hamilton, Feb. 28, 1878, and then the Roebuck family moved to Victoria, B.C., returning to Ontario in 1885.

Roebuck later became a reporter for the Toronto Star.

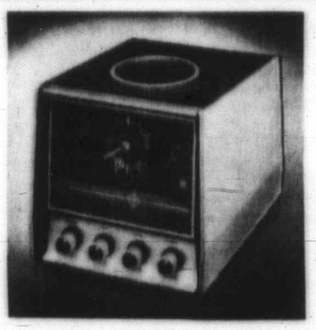
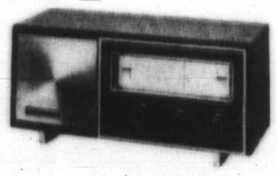
The first radio with a talking clock.
There have been many different kinds of clock radios, but never anything like the "Tele-Time". Panasonic engineers have developed a "talking clock" with a voice inside. And when you touch the top, it interrupts the superb FM/AM radio to tell you the time. Out loud! Twenty-four hours a day.
You can set the "Tele-Time" to announce the time automatically, every hour. At night it will lull you to sleep with up to 60 minutes of music, then turn itself off. In the morning it wakes you up to music or with a whisper or a shout, as the time is repeated every ten seconds for up to three minutes.
There's even a remote control, so you can hear the time from a distance, or without turning over in bed.
The RC-6900C. What next?

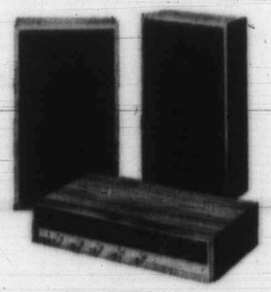


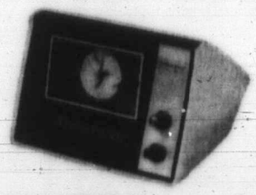
The sensitive FM/AM table radio with the sensible price.
The "Dolphin" offers creative simplicity in an FM/AM table radio with distinctive slide-rule tuning, built in antennas, AFC on FM, and a full-range 4" speaker. Solid state engineered to provide you with years of trouble-free enjoyment. RE-6137DC.



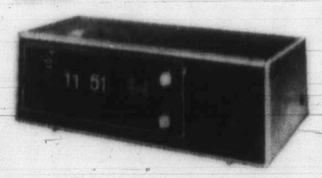
Panasonic's superb clock and table radios are something to talk about. Especially the one that talks itself.

Walnut for the stereo nut.
An end in itself or a great beginning.
"The Barrington" is a superb FM/AM/FM stereo receiver with input jacks for phonograph and tape deck so you can grow with it.
It features black-out slide rule tuning, individual bass and treble controls, AFC on FM, tuned RF stage, balance control, and separate full range 6½" speakers. RE-7670DC.
A matching 4-speed-automatic record changer is available at additional cost. RD-7673CA.





The AM digital clock radio that turns itself off at night and turns you on in the morning.
The sleek, low profile "Morningtone" contains every advanced clock radio feature.
Like easy-to-read lighted digital numbers, a 24-hour alarm you set just once and it goes off every morning at the same time, sensitive AM reception, rotary slide-rule tuning, and a timer that shuts the radio off after you're asleep.
The solid state engineered RC-1286C. Simply beautiful!



The space age FM/AM alarm that saves you space.
The compact, solid state engineered "Woodbridge" features a full size clock face with sweep second hand, music and buzzer alarm, a 60 minute sleep timer, sensitive FM/AM reception, slide-rule tuning, built-in antennas, and a full-range 2½" speaker. RC-6121C.

Toll Charges For Telex May Rise

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian National and Canadian Pacific announced Wednesday they have requested permission to increase some tolls and charges for private wire, Telex and broadband services.

The request to the Canadian transport commission asks that the rates become effective March 1, 1972.

As requested, the increases provide for:

- An average increase of 12½ per cent in private wire equipment rental charges and 50 per cent in private wire installation and relocation charges.
- An increase of about 6 per cent in Telex toll charges.
- An increase of about 10 per cent in some broadband equipment rental charges and 30 per cent in most broadband installation and relocation charges.

The companies said in a joint statement the increases "are necessary to help offset the heavy capital costs of a continuous expansion program."

Lack of increases would harm their competitive position, endanger their ability to maintain and expand existing services and all but eliminate innovation of new services.

They estimated that the increases, if they had been in effect through 1971, would have increased revenue of CN-CP Telecommunications by about $3,149,000 or 3.8 per cent.

The statement said equipment rental charges were last increased in 1959, installation and relocation charges not increased in about 30 years, Telex tolls unchanged for 14 years, and broadband charges basically unchanged since the service started in 1967.

Canada Widens Aid to India

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced Wednesday it will send an additional $18 million worth of aid to India to help combat problems caused by the influx of nine million refugees from East Pakistan, to bring Canadian aid to nearly $25 million.

Facts and Figures For All Occasions

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

You can do some wonderful things with statistics. Hockey players negotiate their next year's salary on the number of goals and assists while the manager can counter with the number of times the player was on the ice when the opposing team scored.

Press agents for movie starlets once made their living on the right number combinations. Labor, management, governments and opposition parties like to trot out statistics at the proper time.

Statistics can be a valuable tool if put into the proper hands. An increasing number of business firms in B.C. are finding out just how valuable as they draw upon the resources of the Bureau of Economics and Statistics, part of the Department of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce.

Several hundred requests per week come to the bureau for statistical information. Often such requests are met by the return mail of one of the 24 or so books and pamphlets published by the branch each year, but more often they're simply answered directly through on-hand resource material.

Department minister Waldo Skillings has about 30 people employed in the bureau, headed up by Jack Meredith. Included are 13 economists.

Trends and economic conditions are their stock in trade. They could tell you, for instance, what the projected population figures are for any area of B.C. that has come under one of their special regional studies.

Other items, such as imports and exports, are of vital interest to companies affected in that field. Jack I'Anson, one of the economists, is on top of such things as the number of men's shirts, for instance, that are brought in from Hong Kong.

The bureau also publishes studies for other provincial departments such as mines and petroleum resources.

Most of the studies are born as a result of many inquiries in a particular field. Gerry Sandve, a researcher who specializes in the regional studies, will put six months or more work into getting out one of the reports, with many other employees supplying much of the information.

Regional studies to date are titled Central Kootenay, Columbia-Shuswap, Bulkley-Nechako and Okanagan-Shuswap. Lillooet-Nicola-Highland Valley is currently under study.

Another recent publication is called The California Market. It tells a prospective exporter to the U.S. state all kinds of interesting information about market prospects, regulations and duties.

Of special interest in the California project was the fact that the state provided B.C. with a computer tape that listed all imports through San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco customs. Similar tapes are brought from other agencies, such as the federal government, to assist the projects.

Special industry studies are also tackled. Some of the recent ones are on mobile homes, confectionery, soaps and detergents.

One booklet that the bureau takes special pride in is a Manual of Resources of B.C., which has been adopted for use in the provincial school system.

Competition Act Bill Will Be Revised

EDMONTON (CP) — Constructive proposals by industry and other groups will be reflected in a revised version of the new federal competition bill, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Wednesday.

Speaking at a seminar on the legislation, the minister said the bill introduced in Parliament last June will die on the order paper at the end of the current session, expected at the end of the year.

"Early in the next session we will reintroduce the competitition act in a revised form to reflect the constructive proposals we have received."

He expected to make some announcements soon about items needing further drafting work or modification.

The seminar was arranged by the Canadian Manufacturers Association, the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and Better Business Bureau and the University of Alberta. Basford asked them to submit suggestions on the bill so they could be considered in the revision.

Basford said he has been disappointed in some of the response to the bill and his request for views.

He had repeatedly said he would listen to any constructive proposals to improve the legislation and the government had gone "to extraordinary lengths to provide opportunities for those views to be presented."

But there had been some hasty and ill-considered interpretations of the legislation and some persons seemed to be trying "to create a strident opposition designed to bring pressure for withdrawal of the bill."

Airline Fares

Agreement Near

HONOLULU (UPI) — The world's airlines were reported near agreement Wednesday on a fare structure for trans-Atlantic flights.

Details were not available, but it was known that chief executives of 24 airlines flying between North America and Europe had generally agreed on a three-tiered price structure for excursion fares. The conference was recessed shortly after noon until later in the day.

"It is going extremely well," said Anthony Vandyk, public relations director of the International Air Transport Association, which is holding its 27th annual general meeting here.

"I am optimistic that they will come out of the meeting with some policy agreement so well defined that the traffic conferences won't have much to do."

The meeting was called by the airlines themselves after three previous IATA traffic conferences, meetings at which international fares are set, failed to reach agreement on rates to charge for trans-Atlantic flights. Lufthansa, the West German airline, refused to go along with the others and announced it would offer low fares to meet competition from charter airlines.

About 100 top airline executives, many of them presidents and board chairmen, were present at the closed meeting. They indicated that after the recess, called so they could attend a social function previously arranged, they would work through the night if necessary to reach agreement.

Vandyk said that while no final agreement had been reached, there was a consensus for a three-tiered rate structure for individual excursion fares, which are the crux of the problem. Excursion fares apply to round trips within a certain time period.

Under the three-tiered structure, rates would vary for peak seasons, mid-seasons and low seasons. Currently, there is a two-tiered system in effect.

Vandyk also said there was a general consensus that retained, at least for the three-tiered system, while meeting Lufthansa's objections, could help scheduled airlines meet charter competition by giving them more flexibility and in attracting travellers to non-peak periods.

John Churchill, 1st Duke of Marlborough (1650-1722) had the uncanny ability of appearing before his adversaries a day earlier than expected. Marlborough's skill on the battlefield was only exceeded by the adroitness, candor and success of his diplomacy.
His continual accuracy in evaluating the connection between "cause and effect" is still admired today.
The Research Department of Richardson Securities of Canada is vitally concerned with the pivotal investment issues of "cause and effect." Possible Danger

Corvair Owners Told But Bill All Theirs

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. will spend $2 million to notify 760,000 owners of Corvair cars of a possible carbon monoxide danger but said Wednesday it will not pay repair bills.

Under a unique agreement with the Department of Transportation in Washington, GM agreed to recall the 1961-69 Corvairs without admitting responsibility for any defective systems.

GM has been under pressure to recall the cars to check for possible carbon monoxide leaks from faulty heater systems.

If GM had agreed to pick up the tab for repair of faulty systems, it could have cost as much as $129 million or an estimated $170 per car.

GM has maintained that there is no danger of fumes leaking into the passenger compartments if owners maintain their cars properly.

The problem was unique to the Corvair, America's only rear-engine, air-cooled car until it was phased out of production with the 1969 model. A total of 1.1 million Corvairs were produced between 1961 and 1969, but it was estimated that barely more than half of them, mostly later models, are still on the road.

Ownership Report Now Book

TORONTO (CP) — The abridged version of the federal cabinet report on foreign ownership published last week in Canadian Forum magazine appeared Wednesday in paperback book form.

Published by New Press, Toronto, the $1.95 book is called A Citizen's Guide to the Gray Report, the same title used by the magazine when it published what is said was an edited but authentic version of the cabinet report of Revenue Minister Herb Gray.

The first press run for the paperback was 10,000 copies and the publishers said almost all were sold by advance order. Negotiations are in progress for a second printing.

Ex-Exchange Men Decline Positions

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Van Luven, who resigned recently as president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, said Tuesday he has decided against accepting an appointment with Imperial Marine Industries Ltd.

Van Luven had accepted a conditional directorship and was considering a proposal that he become president of Imperial Marine. Stewart Thompson, former executive assistant at the stock exchange, was considering an offer to become vice-president.

Blocks of 50,000 shares had been placed in trust for each, the transfer to be conditional on their appointments.

Jack Mars, a Vancouver businessman, had similarly joined the board with a conditional appointment as chairman. He also has declined a permanent appointment.

"The three of us felt we couldn't add anything to the company so we didn't accept permanent appointments," Van Luven said. "Naturally, the stock will go back to the company."

Van Luven said he is still considering "two or three proposals" for full time employment and has accepted two directorships "which will be announced by the companies."

Roberts Bank

Big Coal Pile To Get Bigger

VANCOUVER (CP) — The coal storage capacity of Westshore Terminals at Roberts Bank, south of Vancouver, will be increased next month by 600,000 long tons to handle coal from Fording River, north of Fernie in southeastern B.C.

The expansion, which will cost about $4.4 million, will increase the total storage capacity at the deep sea port to 1,465,000 long tons.

The project provides for two additional storage piles, and loading equipment which can maintain a peak shiploading rate of 6,300 tons an hour.

Fording Coal Co., a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific Ltd., has a contract to export three million tons of coal annually to Japan.

It may shock you but it's true.

If a pregnant woman is addicted to heroin her unborn baby will also be addicted to it. Withdrawal symptoms are frightening for a grown person. You can imagine what they are like for a baby only a few days old.

This is one of the many human tragedies of heroin addiction that doctors see in increasing numbers throughout British Columbia. Heroin enslaves its user at a cost that can run to over $10,000 a year. An overdose can cause coma or death. Withdrawal causes severe symptoms of nausea, cramps and diarrhea.

Possession carries a penalty of up to 7 years in prison, and trafficking, up to life.

If you're hooked on heroin and want to get off, see a doctor or the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C., 2524 Cypress Street, Vancouver. If you're tempted to try the drug, don't. The misery you will suffer just isn't worth it.

Hydro Wage Hike 15.8 Per Cent

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro electrical workers will receive a 15.8 per cent wage increase over two years under the terms of an arbitration report issued Wednesday by Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeals.

The binding decision gives the 2,400 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers a 7.9 per cent increase retroactive to last April 1 when their previous contract expired and another 7.9 per cent starting Jan. 1.

In Victoria, B.C. Labor Minister James Chabot said he had no comment to make on the report.

The appointment of Nemetz brought about the end of a province-wide strike earlier this year after months of fruitless negotiations. The union had sought a 22-per-cent increase and Hydro had originally offered 12 per cent.

In his report, Nemetz said both sides agreed to the two-year term of the new agreement.

On the issue of contracting out by Hydro, the crown corporation must in the future require contractors using unorganized labor to maintain the same standards of wages and working conditions as the union agreement.

"It is apparent that the Hydro is now distributing its work among larger number of small contractors, many of whom have no collective agreements with organized labor," the report said.

On isolation allowances, Nemetz ruled that it would not be advisable to make any change in the index prior to a scheduled review of the system next year.

"I have every confidence that after receipt of that review the parties will be able to establish an equitable cut-off point on the revived isolation index before the termination of the new agreement," he wrote.

Arbitration hearings into the contract dispute ended Oct. 25. Under the old contract, a journeyman lineman earned $5.39 an hour.

A Hydro spokesman described the award as a "great disappointment."

"It will add greatly to inflationary pressures and will increase costs to our customers who must pay an additional $3.3 million a year in wages alone to our electrical workers, the most highly paid of any electric utility workers in all Canada," he said in a statement.

"For the future it will discourage other unions from engaging in collective bargaining."

For the price of a Skylark you can own a Buick.

To begin with, Skylark is priced a lot lower than you may have thought. In fact, if you can afford to buy a new car, the chances are you can afford to buy a new Skylark.

And when you compare Skylark with the other cars in its class, well, there just isn't much comparison. That's because Skylark comes equipped with Buick features.

Like Buick's semi-closed cooling system. The one that should never overheat.

Like Buick's trued tires and wheels for a Buick smooth ride.

Like Buick's inner-fender construction and a Magic-Mirror finish to keep your new Skylark looking new.

Like Buick's nickle-plated exhaust valves on the standard V8. They help promote longer valve life.

And like any Buick, Skylark gives you the thoughtful attention to detail and quality you've come to expect from a car that bears the Buick name.

All those features make Skylark a great new car to own.

And because Skylark is an intermediate-sized Buick, the price is intermediate-sized. So Skylark is easy to own, too.

In truth, what you really need for buying a Buick Skylark is a sharp eye for value and a desire to own something better.

So for the price of a Skylark you really can have a Buick.

SOMETHING TO BELIEVE IN

GM MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Buick on Occupant Protection.

The driver and passengers in the 1972 Buicks mentioned on this page are literally surrounded by features designed for their protection. The padded instrument panel is energy-absorbing. As is the steering column. And the front seat back tops. There's a steel Cargo-guard between the trunk and the passenger compartment. And steel Side-guard beams in all doors for added side impact security. Further impact security is provided in such areas as the fuel tank. Nothing has knowingly been left to chance. Some features, however, require action on your part if they are to do their jobs. Seat belts must be buckled up at all times. Same with the shoulder belts. But all the occupant protection features in your car aren't near as important as the way you drive. When driving, be careful, be defensive, be sober.

'Knew We Weren't Over City'

U.S. Pilot Ordered Crew To Quit Faltering Plane

EDMONTON (CP) — The pilot of a United States Navy Intruder jet aircraft said Wednesday he ordered his men to bail out after he lost control of the $16 million plane.

The aircraft which had participated in a NORAD training exercise, crashed Tuesday soon after taking off from the Canadian Forces base at Namao, 15 miles northaest of here.

A spokesman for CFB Namao said the twin-jet plane had stopped at hte base to refuel on its way home to Whidbey Island naval air station in Washington.

It crashed two miles north of the international airport, 18 milse south of Edmonton.

Cmr. James Harmon, 38, said he gave the order to bail-out following a malfunction in the right engine and failure of the plane's hydraulic system. He was flying at 13,000 feet.

Because of the overcast the pilot couldn't see exactly where they were, Cmdr. Harmon said.

"But we knew we weren't over the city."

Cmdr. Harmon and two of his men landed within a quarter mile of each other on a Leduc area farm.

The other man, Lieut. Michael Allen, Jr., landed in another farm field half a mile from the others.

"One of our men (Lieut.-Cmdr. Wayne Martin) landed in a tree," Cmdr. Harmon said. But it was Lieut. Allen and Airman Roy Levean who were slightly injured.

Allen required 23 stitches to close a head wound and Levean 17 stitches, also to the head.

Cmdr. Harmon said he and two of his men expected to return to their Washington base Wednesday. Lieut. Allen was expected to remain in hospital at Namao for observation.

A four-man investigation board and a naval surgeon arrived from the Whidbey Island naval air station Wednesday and the board will join Namao officials and civilian authorities in an investigation of the crash.

Detective Charged

NEW YORK (UPI) — Narcotics Detective Edward Egan, who plays a hard-nosed cop in the film The French Connection, which was based on a case he worked on, was charged Wednesday with withholding small quantities of confiscated drugs and drug equipment in 22 separate cases.

He also faces departmental charges of failure to appear as a prosecution witness in a court case which was therefore dismissed.

In Weaponry Development

Russia Leads Way

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has overtaken and in some cases surpassed the West in developing missiles and other weaponry — and done so by increasing reliance on its own technology, Janes Weapons Systems for 1971-72 said Wednesday.

The 590-page volume, accepted as "authoritative" by military and defence experts, said pressure for defence spending cutbacks in the United States and other Western nations was at least partially responsible for differences between the United States and Soviet defences.

"The belief once held in some places outside the Soviet Union that most developments made there have had precursors in the West clearly no longer applies," they said.

The editors saw a need "greater than ever before, for Western nations to continue to invest in such developments if they are to maintain or perhaps even achieve parity with the East."

The editors cited as an example the Soviet early warning radar aircraft codenamed Moss, which "has been in use for several years and according to unofficial but reliable sources, is in fact carrying out operational missions."

"This immediately either implies a significant difference between the techniques employed by the respective U.S. and U.S.S.R. systems or, if the techniques are similar, that a more advanced level of applied technology has been reached in the Soviet Union," the editors said.

Janes also said the Soviets have developed a supersonic bomber with low-altitude capability at no loss of speed. It is identified by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization codename "Backfire."

"The approximately equivalent U.S. B-1A bomber project is as yet only at the mock-up stage, while Russia has two Backfire prototypes flying," the editors said.

Regions Hit 'Visual Pollution'

Roadside Mess Cleanup Target

Vancouver Island regional boards are determined to crack down on "visual pollution" along major highways.

Ramshackel development, unsightly trailer parks and general deterioration of natural beauty adjacent to Vancouver Island highways are to be the target for the boards' joint program.

Capital Regional Board instructed regional planner Tony Roberts Wednesday to represent the board in future meetings with other regional planners and consultants.

At these meetings, a course is to be charted for a "highway beautification program."

Roberts was asked to report back to the board by the end of next February. Planners of the other Vancouver Island regional boards are expected to submit similar reports to their boards.

The program was spearheaded by the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities. The association worked out the proposal at its regular annual meeting in Duncan last month.

Details to be investigated by the planners include:

- Possible relocation of commercial enterprises now using property adjacent to highways.
- Improvement of existing eyesores through landscaping.
- Relocation or improvement of existing trailer parks and the possible banning of trailer sales facilities—along the highways.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford told a meeting of the board's committee of the whole that it was high time someone stopped the visual pollution along highways.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, regional board chairman, said conditions were getting worse year by year.

In other business, the committee was told that the 1971 census results, recently released by Statistics Canada, would alter the system of representation on the board for several municipalities.

The number of representatives will remain the same, committee was told, but the number of votes for directors will change in some cases.

Esquimalt, North Saanich, Oak Bay and Sidney wouldn't be affected by the new population figures, Dennis Young, the board's executive director, said.

The one representative for Central Saanich will have two votes instead of one. The three Saanich directors will have 14 votes instead of 12 and Victoria's three representatives will have 13 votes instead of the former 12.

Regional board areas are allotted one vote for every 5,000 of population.

Consequently, Saanich, for the first time, has more combined votes than Victoria. The new population for Saanich is 65,052 and Victoria's is 60,897.

Whether the number of votes held by representatives of the unorganized territories will change hasn't been established, because no new population figures are yet available.

The committee was also told that a major planning study for the region's Colwood - Langford area was "coming along fine."

The study, carried out by students of the University of Victoria's geography department at no charge to the region, is expected to be completed some time next year.

The study is to determine the regional board's planning concept for the area's future development.

In Chime for Christmas?

Fund drive, launched by provincial carilloneur Herman Bergink and sponsored by B.C. Netherlands Association through sale of record featuring Bergink and Dutch carilloneur Leen 't Hart, is well under way and 13 new bells are being set into place in carillon tower at Belleville and Government. Drive started last July 6 to honor B.C. Centennial 71, when Premier Bennett received first record. In addition to four bass bells shown, nine trebles are being installed to make total of 62 in tower. When complete Victoria carillon will be largest in Canada.

Amchitka Sequel:

Job Suspension Firm Policy, Not Punishment

The manager of Victoria Plywood Ltd. denied Wednesday that five of his company's workers were punished for taking part in a 30-minute work stoppage promoted by B.C. Federation of Labor Nov. 3 as a demonstration against the Nov. 6 Amchitka nuclear test blast.

The denial came from Newton Cameron.

The federation, currently in convention in Vancouver, was told Tuesday by secretary Ray Haines that the five mill workers were sent home for the rest of the day, were docked five hours pay and had warning notices placed in their files.

Haynes told the convention he was made aware of the case by Murray Drew, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America.

Cameron said Drew is an employee of Victoria Plywood Ltd., on leave of absence to serve as an officer of IWA local 118 at the convention.

He emphasized that what Drew said was not true.

Cameron said about 8:30 a.m. Nov. 3 the plant committee chairman was asked if a general work stoppage was advocated by the union at 11 a.m. and was told this was not the case.

"The superintendent told the chairman that it was not company policy to grant work stoppages of this kind, and if any employees participated they would be suspended," Cameron said.

He explained that about 11 a.m. two spreader crews and the edge-gluing crew quit working.

Cameron said the foreman asked the five people involved if they would agree to take their lunch break at this time to minimize lost production and they refused.

"He then instructed them to return to work. They paid no attention to his instructions and were suspended for the rest of the shift and were given warning slips, the regular practice of this company."

He said the suspended employees were not paid for work not performed, "hardly docked pay for their sacrifice, as was suggested by Mr. Haynes."

The following week Drew went to Cameron's office.

"Drew inferred that the company's action if the warning slips were not recalled could result in unfavorable publicity for the company at the convention, which he didn't want to see, but which was beyond his control," Cameron said, and added that the slips were not recalled.

Drew said during an interview at the convention that Victoria Plywood company is partly U.S.-owned. He added the foreman who imposed the suspensions was also from the U.S.

Cameron stressed that Victoria Plywood is 100 per cent Canadian-owned and the foreman who imposed the suspensions is a Canadian citizen who came to Canada before the age of two and was unlikely to have any particular U.S. bias.

'Extensive Revisions' in Mind

Brothers Pledges To Study University Tenure Question

Education Minister Donald Brothers said Wednesday his department will review the question of teacher tenure at universities in B.C.

In an interview he said he was concerned that universities had been unable to deal with the problem themselves.

"There are substantial difficulties in Simon Fraser University and an inordinate amount of difficulty at the University of Victoria over the question of tenure of the teaching staff," he said.

Brothers acknowledged that the provincial government has no authority in the hiring or firing of professors at public universities.

But he said changes he has in mind would involve "extensive revisions" of the Universities Act and these cannot be prepared in time for the next session of the Legislature, scheduled to open Jan. 30.

Brothers' statement followed the resignation Tuesday of Bruce Partridge, president of the University of Victoria.

Partridge had been censured this year by the Canadian Association of University Teachers in a dispute that followed refusal of the university to grant tenure to two assistant professors and to renew the contract of an instructor.

Told of Brothers' announcement by the Colonist, UVic faculty association president Dr. Charles Doyle said it was not possible to comment until he had specific details of what changes Brothers might make in the act.

But, he said, he hoped the government would not immediately move for greater control of universities and professors. In the long run, this would discourage people from coming to B.C. universities and would ultimately lower their standards.

At University of Victoria, a great many of the problems could be mended under the acting president, Hugh Farquhar, without the need of more government control, he added.

But student president Ian McKinnon thought that greater government control was "a move that had to come."

"The universities haven't been able to solve the problems of tenure on their own. We haven't; Simon Fraser hasn't. And somebody has to solve them."

Also, McKinnon said, the public generally was beginning to turn against the idea of tenure and the whole question of it was being studied across Canada.

"It would be nice if B.C. could take the lead in this matter," he said, but added he was not sure the present B.C. government was the best one to take the "carefully considered" look at the problem which would be needed.

On the question of Partridge's resignation, McKinnon said that personally he was "very sorry to see the president go."

"For his sake it's probably a good thing; for the university, it's probably not a good thing," he said.

Most students he had talked to were "shocked" by the sudden news of the resignation. Many were sorry about it, but many were also "relieved," he said.

"Some thought that Partridge was the sole cause of our troubles, so they think that when he leaves, all the troubles will be solved.

"But I don't think those students quite understood. The president was not the only cause of the problems the university has had, and his leaving will not magically solve them."

Partridge received support from Saanich and the Islands MLA John Tisdalle who said in a statement to the Colonist that the president "has weathered a terrific storm and just when he had created a suitable atmosphere for navigational progress, I hate to see him yield up the helm."

"In my opinion, a university that indulges in the dubious luxury of destroying presidents can hardly claim community leadership qualities," the Socred MLA said.

"The cry of fair play on the campus must be a hollow croak in the throats of those who cried for the neck of Partridge.

"And the taxpayer can only bemoan the fact he pays for a tune he in no way wants to dance to."

A UVic professor who had been one of Partridge's strongest supporters during the last troubled year on campus said he believed the president's resignation was "a very great loss to the university."

The professor, Dr. J. B. MacLean, said he was also alarmed that a vice-president of academic affairs now would not be appointed, because the position was an important one.

But, he said, he was "very grateful we have a man of Dean Farquhar's stature" to step into Partridge's shoes. Education Dean Hugh Farquhar has been appointed interim president.

Doyle said he felt the university needed an "eminent academic" to be its next full-time president. And, he added, "at this time, it would be very nice if he were a Canadian."

Indian Plight Shown

The preliminary results of a study of B.C.'s non-status Indians show that 65 per cent of them were unemployed last summer.

The analysis of a survey, made under the sponsorship of an Opportunities for Youth grant, was presented to the annual meeting in Victoria Wednesday of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians by Prof. W. T. Stanbury of the University of B.C.'s commerce faculty and Jay Seegal, who is working on his doctorate in anthropology at UBC.

There are between 40,000 and 60,000 non-status Indians in B.C. Non-status describes a person who is genetically and culturally an Indian but for one reason or another is not defined as one under the federal Indian Act.

Such persons often are Indian women who marry persons who are not registered as Indians. Others may be Indians who voluntarily sever their ties with a band under the enfranchisement section of the Indian Act.

Stanbury told the meeting the survey results will be in final form in January, when the data will be compared with parallel material on registered Indians and the general B.C. population.

Last summer's survey involved questioning 1,309 persons, most of whom lived in the interior or northern districts of B.C. The only Vancouver Island centre surveyed was Victoria.

Results show most non-status Indians have nine or fewer years of schooling and the largest fraction of the population was unskilled in terms of labor.

About 57 per cent of the respondents said they had been to a Canada Manpower office and 37 per cent said they had not. However, 80 per cent of those going to a Manpower office for assistance, when asked whether they found the counselling helpful, either did not answer the question or said it was not helpful.

Most of the non-status Indians who had jobs said they found employment through personal applications. For example, only 0.9 per cent attributed their success to a union and 1.9 credited Canada Manpower.

Seizure Blamed For Accident

Victoria police said Metro Shabtowski of 2733 Strathmore is believed to have had a seizure while driving south on Vancouver near Johnson at 4:37 p.m. Wednesday, causing his car to be in collision with a car owned by Christopher Wright of 3441 Harriet.

Shabtowski was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Camosun Budget Estimated 'About 1.1 Mills'

First estimates show Camosun College may cost Greater Victoria school district ratepayers about 1.1 mills in taxes for the 1972-73 fiscal year.

A provisional budget presented to the finance committee of the college council Wednesday night showed estimated expenditures of $2,314,248 for the year which will begin April 1, 1972.

But college officials told the committee that local taxpayers will have to raise only $449,651 of this, the rest being covered by tuition fees, grants from provincial and federal governments, and an estimated surplus of $150,000 from this year's college operations.

The college has been in operation for nine months, beginning in July.

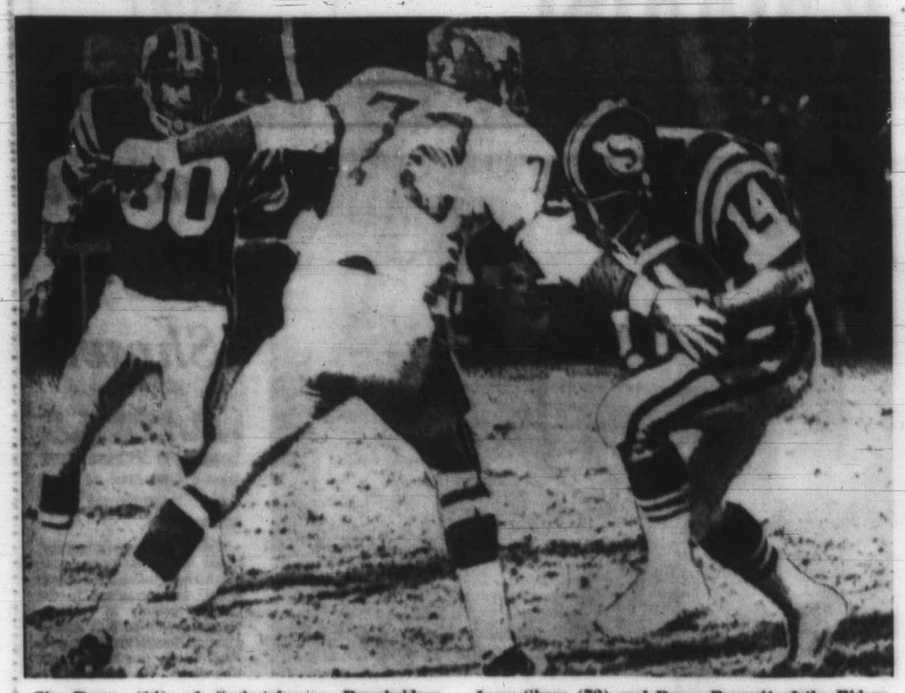
The mill rate for 1971-72 was about .7 mills for the nine months. This would be .93 mills projected over a 12-month period.

When the college was first planned in the fall of 1970, taxpayers were told it would not cause any increase in costs because the Landsdowne campus was available for it to work from.

The projected budget — which college officials said was still only a rough estimate of costs, because the number of students for next year could not be determined — contains provisions for several new programs which the council has approved in principle.

These programs, mainly in the technical and science fields, will require new faculty, new equipment and small additions to two huts on campus.

The provisional budget will be discussed by the full council at a meeting Tuesday night.



Gig Perez (14) of Saskatchewan Roughriders makes the first of two interceptions, which he carried for a total of 75 yards, as intended-receiver Jerry Shaw (72) and Bruce Bennett of the Riders move in on the play.

Stampeders Top Riders To Keep Western Title

REGINA — Calgary Stampeders advanced to the Grey Cup final Wednesday night by defeating Saskatchewan Roughriders, 23-21, to win the best-of-three Western Football Conference final in straight games.

Stampeders won the first game, 30-21, Saturday in Calgary.

The crushing blow for the Roughriders was a touchdown by Rudy Linterman with 30 seconds left in the third quarter which gave the Stampeders a 23-14 lead.

ELUDES PURSUERS

On the play, Tim Roth and Ed McQuarters were in on Calgary's Jerry Keeling and it appeared he would be thrown for a loss. But Keeling eluded his pursuers and tossed a long pass to Linterman, who was in the clear, for the scoring play which covered 71 yards.

Stampeders defeated Roughriders in the western final last year, but were defeated by Montreal Alouettes in the Grey Cup final.

IMPRESSIVE DRIVES

The Stampeders opened impressively staging long marches in the first quarter but Roughriders proved stubborn near the goal line and Calgary had to settle for two singles when Larry Robinson missed field-goal tries of 23 and 20 yards.

Calgary continued to dominate play and ran their lead to 9-0 before halftime but Roughriders stormed back with two touchdowns in the first 10 minutes of the second half.

REGAINED LEAD

Stampeders regained the lead when Hugh McKinnis broke up the middle from a 42-yard touchdown scamper and just three minutes later Keeling, who earlier fired a touchdown pass to Jon Henderson, hit Linterman for the decisive points.

Robinson converted all three touchdowns.

Silas McKinnie, who picked up 31 yards on seven carries and took six passes for 76 yards, scored one Saskatchewan touchdown on a one-yard plunge, George Reed plunged two yards for another and Ron Lancaster scored on a quarterback sneak.

It was Lancaster's first touchdown of the season and came midway through the final quarter. The Stampeders blanketed Roughrider receivers in the late stages and effectively kept their rivals out of range.

Jack Abendschan, who went pointless on two field-goal tries, converted all three touchdowns.

TWO INTERCEPTIONS

Reed's touchdown was set up by Gig Perez' second interception of the night.

Perez got the Roughriders out of trouble once in the first quarter when he grabbed a Keeling pass intended for Jerry Shaw and ran it 20 yards.

Then—in the third quarter, he made his second interception and rambled 55 yards to the Calgary 13-yard line. Four plays later, Reed crashed over.

TOP PERFORMERS

Linterman, Jesse Mims and McKinnis turned in outstanding performances for Calgary. McKinnis took 16 carries for 104 yards and caught passes for another 19 yards.

Mims carried 12 times for 95 yards and caught three passes for 51. Linterman carried five times for 45 yards and added 105 yards more on three receptions.

Keeling was good on 14 of 24 pass attempts for 242 yards, while Lancaster connected on 17 of 26 for 199 yards.

The frozen field and 26-degree temperature didn't prevent the teams from coming up with one of the most exciting games of the season but the 19-mile-an-hour wind proved a factor.

All five field-goal tries — Robinson was short on a 42-yarder in the final quarter — were into the wind.

The Stampeders will meet either Toronto Argonauts or Hamilton Tiger Cats in the Grey Cup final in Vancouver Nov. 28. Argos lead the two-game, total-point eastern final by 15 points after a 23-8 victory on Sunday. The clubs meet Sunday in Toronto.

Bulky Buster Mathis No Match for Ali

HOUSTON (AP) — Muhammad Ali dropped an exhausted Buster Mathis twice in each of the last two rounds and pounded out a one-sided unanimous decision in a 12-round heavyweight bout at the Astrodome Wednesday night.

Mathis, fighting for the first time in 2½-years, apparently went down as much from the effects of exhaustion and the accumulation of punches he had received as he did from the power of the actual knockdown blows.

Ali was scoring with a spearing left jab mixed with an occasional short right and left hook in the 11th round as he had for most of the fight when suddenly Mathis went to his hand and knees from a short right hand.

UP AT SIX

Buster got up at the count of six, took the mandatory eight-count and then went down again from what almost looked like a slap.

This time, Mathis was saved by the bell at the count of four.

In this fight, the count did not continue after the bell.

Early in the 12th round, Mathis went down again from a right hand and was up at the count of seven. Ali shook his head and seemed reluctant to hit Mathis. Then, after slapping at Mathis, Ali let loose with a flurry of short punches that dropped his 256-pound opponent for an eight count. Mathis once again struggled to his feet.

Referee Chris Jordan scored it 118 points for Ali to 105 for Mathis under the 10-point must system. Judge Ernie Taylor had it 118 to 104 for Ali, and judge Earl Keel had it 119-108 for the former world heavyweight champion.

The Associated Press had Ali in front 118-108.

It was simply no contest as Ali, weighing the heaviest of his career at 227 pounds, boxed circles around Mathis and never let the Grand Rapids, Mich., fighter land with more than one good punch at a time.

DOUBLE SHUFFLE

Until the knockdowns occurred, the biggest roar from the crowd came in the sixth when Ali went into a shuffle and Mathis imitated him.

The victory was the second for Ali since he lost to heavyweight champion Joe Frazier last March 8 and Ali has said he will keep fighting until he gets a shot to regain the title stripped from him when he got into trouble with the military draft.

Chuvalo Wins

HOUSTON (UPI) — Brawling, bloody George Chuvalo, the Canadian heavyweight champion, scored a unanimous 10-round decision over Cleveland "Big Cat" Williams Wednesday night in a preliminary to the Muhammad Ali-Buster Mathis fight.

Chuvalo, 227, had Williams in trouble several times but never could put the 38-year-old Houston product on the floor. Williams, 229½, cut Chuvalo under the right eye in the first round and across the left side of his nose in the second round.

Referee Earl Keel scored it 98-93, judge Ernie Taylor, 97-94, judge Jimmy Webb, 98-93, all for Chuvalo.

Coach of Hockey Vikings Realistic Sort of Chap

By KING LEE

Howie Carty is a realistic sort of chap . . . he's aiming his University of Victoria Vikings at fourth place this season.

Carty is in his second season as coach of the Western Canada Inter-Collegiate Association Hockey League team and his enthusiasm is partly based on the Vikings' improved showing last season. Carty had the club at 3-17, which was an improvement over the Vikings' initial campaign in the WCIAA, an 0-14 disaster.

The other part of his enthusiasm is because of what he considers the vast improvement of the club. They're stronger in goal and on defence and there is more depth.

Vikings open their 18-game schedule Friday night in Vancouver against playoff-champion University of British Columbia Thunderbirds. The clubs complete their weekend series with a game on Saturday, also on the Mainland.

FORMER COUGARS

Six of the Vikings were former Victoria Cougars. Goalkeeper Murray Finlay, defencemen Randy Bock and Wayne Hendry and forwards Dave Cousins, Greg Gow and Scott Munro were with the Cougars as recently as this season.

Finlay, who starred with the Cougars in their first season in the B.C. Junior league in 1968-69, sat out last season to regain his amateur status. He played with Salem Rebels in the professional Eastern League prior to that. Backing up Finlay will be Robin Hay, a holdover.

DEFENCE PAIRS

Bock and Hendry both left the Western Canada Hockey League club this season and will be together on one defensive partnership. Bock, a 19-year-old, 200-pounder, is the Vikings captain, and Hendry, who obtained his release from the Cougars Nov. 11, is an 18-year-old, 185-pound rearguard.

Two 18-year-old graduates from Powell River Knights, finalists in the B.C. juvenile playoffs last season, make up the other defensive pairing. Pierre Bergeron, a 170-pounder, and Bob McCallum, a 185-pounder, will form the other unit and Paul Hanson, a 23-year-old, 190-pounder who played with the Vikings the past two seasons, will be Carty's fifth defenceman.

EXPERIENCED CENTRES

Two of the three centremen with the Vikings have had experience with the Vikings. Greg Gow, the oldest at 23, was with the Cougars in 1968-69 and played with Chemainus Blues of the Vancouver Island Hockey League last season. Dave Cousins, a 22-year-old who led the Vikings in scoring last season with 32 goals and 20 assists, played with Cougars in 1969-70.

Jack Richardson, a 19-year-old returnee who was selected Uvic's rookie of the year last season, is the other Viking centre.

MORE PUNCH

On the right side, Carty has Scott Munro, Doug Carter and Gord Palmer. Munro, a 20-year-old who has three seasons' experience with the Cougars, is expected to give the Vikings more scoring punch. Carter, 22, played two seasons with the Vikings before missing all of last season because of a separated shoulder. Palmer, 23, performed for two seasons with Comox Totems of the Pacific Coast Hockey League before joining the Vikings.

Vikings have plenty of youth on the left wing with George Walton, Dave Stapleford and Dave Metcalfe. Walton, 19, is a holdover, Stapleford, 19, played for Dalhousie University Tigers last season in the Maritimes University Hockey League, and Metcalfe, 18, is a graduate of junior hockey ranks at the Victoria Racquet Club.

UTILITY PLAYERS

Don Gemmell, Terry Severyn and Terry Oscarson are listed as the utility players on the club. Gemmell comes from the Powell River Knights, Severyn was with Red Deer Rustlers of the Alberta Junior Hockey League and Oscarson is a Port Alberni product who is getting back into playing shape after suffering a broken ankle in a pre-season game against Stockers North Americans of the Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League.

After losing their first two exhibition games to Stockers this season, 7-5 and 8-2, the Vikings have bounced back with, four straight victories, 7-4 over Stockers, 5-1 against Lake Cowichan, 12-3 over Comox Totems and 9-1 against CFB Esquimalt Buccaneers of the VIHL.

Vikings have left the Vancouver Island league in favor of another UVic entry, Norsemen, and Carty feels this move will help the team in the WCIAA.

"The level of competition in the (VIHL) league wasn't up to WCIAA standards and the academic responsibilities for the players had a lot to do in our decision to drop from the league," said Carty.

Vikings' 10-game home schedule gets under way Friday, Nov. 27, against University of Alberta Golden Bears at Esquimalt Sports Centre. Golden Bears and Thunderbirds are rated by Carty as the teams to beat this season. Alberta are in for two games and the next WCIAA game at home for UVic is Jan. 7, 1973 when University of Calgary Dinosaurs visit the Vikings.

Top half of the eight-team league will qualify for semi-finals which start March 3.

Browne Picked For B.C. Reps

Centre Tom Browne of the Castaways is the only Vancouver Island player named to the British Columbia Rep team to play Australia in an international rugby match at Swangard Stadium, Burnaby, on Dec. 4.

Dave Slater, star scrum-half with the University of Victoria Vikings last season who now plays for Castaways, is the only Islander listed as a reserve.

The rest of the team, coached by Ray Calton of UVic, and nine other reserves are all from the Vancouver area.

Powerful University of British Columbia Thunderbirds have five players selected, including standoff-half Ray Banks, who is captain. The other UBC men are wing Spence McTavish and forwards Bob Jackson, Garth Henrickson and Eric McAvity.

Next best representation went to the Georgians with three — winger Chuck Piester, scrum-half Stu Scholefield and prop Chris Le Fevre.

Others in the team are forward Gord McRae and centre Jerry Lorenz of Kats; forwards Dan Pahl and Paul Johnstone of Ex-Brits; hooker Wally Richardson of Trojans and fullback Barrie Burnham of Meralomas.

With Slater in the reserves are Gary Fumano, Fred Sturrock, Pat Aldous, Dave Langley, Bill Murray, T. K. Kariya, Eric Lillie, Peter Templeton and Barry Leigh.

Only major surprise in the team, announced by Donn Spence, chairman of the B.C. selection committee, is the choice of Scholefield and Banks in preference to Slater and the extremely experienced Kariya, who starred together for Canada on the national team's recent tour of Wales.

The game against B.C. is the only one in Canada for the Australian team, which is on its way home after a 12-match tour of France.

West-United Victory Protested

Victoria West-United could plunge from second to fifth place in the Pacific Coast Soccer League standings without booting another ball if the league allows a protest made by the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds.

Manager-coach Joe Johnson of the Thunderbirds claims the Victoria team made six player changes in the match at UBC last Saturday and has filed an official protest. The league rules allow only five changes to be made with three substitutes.

Coast League president Ken Howarth said in Vancouver Wednesday that he didn't have all the information at hand but expected to make a decision by Friday.

United won the match, 3-2, and is currently tied with Inter-Italia of Vancouver for second place. If the result is reversed, UBC would move into a tie with Inter-Italia and United would find itself in fifth place in the eight-team league — one point behind fellow Victoria team, Gorge Molsons.

Next games: Tonight — Edmonton at Victoria; Vancouver at Brandon.

Victoria Cougars put their two-game win streak on the line tonight when the defending champion Edmonton Oil Kings make their first appearance of the Western Canada Hockey League season at Memorial Arena.

Oil Kings, tied for first place in the Western Division, feature a hard-skating, high-scoring attack that has produced a league high 85 goals in 16 games.

HUCUL ENTHUSED

However Cougars' coach Fred Hucul, enthused with his players following the Medicine Hat game, feels Edmonton can be beaten by close checking and hustle, two of his team's better qualities.

"If we get the total effort we had against Medicine Hat," Hucul said Wednesday, "we've got a fair chance of knocking off Edmonton."

Cougars have been defeated, 3-0, and 5-1, in previous games with Oil Kings.

CENTRE SWITCHES

Centre Tim Struch will probably miss tonight's game after bruising an ankle Tuesday. With Wayne Bianchin out with the flu, Hucul will use Dave George and newly-activated centre Chris Riddell, who was traded to and subsequently released by Edmonton.

Defenceman Blake Robinson will make his first appearance for Cougars since arriving from Winnipeg Jets as part of a three-player trade.

Edmonton is currently tied with Calgary Centennials, four points ahead of Medicine Hat, 5-3 winners against New Westminster Bruins in Wednesday's only game.

Tigers' Stan Weir regained a share of first place in the individual scoring race, scoring a goal and adding two assists. Weir, held pointless by Cougars Tuesday, has 22 goals and 17 assists. Outstanding rookie Dennis Sobchuk of Regina also has 39 points, including 25 assists.

Bill Christie, with a pair of goals, Jeff Ablett and Lanny McDonald completed the Tigers' scoring with Emile Demoissac, Les Jackson and Frank Hyndman replying for the slumping Bruins.

Ticehurst, Mate Share Second

LA ROMANA, Dominican Republic (CP) — Canadian golfers Bert Ticehurst and Gar Hamilton combined for a one-under-par 71 Wednesday for a share of second place after the first round of the annual Dominican international best-ball tournament.

Hamilton, of Toronto, sank a five-foot birdie putt on the final hole to put the Canadians under par after Ticehurst, of Vancouver, caught a trap.

Hamilton and Ticehurst were two strokes behind the leaders in the 72-hole event, Roberto Grell and Alan Mew of Trinidad. They posted 69 on the 6770-yard par-72 seaside Los Cajuiles Country Club course.

Tied for second with Canada are Argentina, Chile and Mexico. Venezuela, Puerto Rico, Spain, Colombia, Dominican Republic and the United States are in a group at 72.

Twenty-one countries are competing.

Softball Body Picks Beasley

VANCOUVER — The B.C. Softball Association has virtually cleaned house.

Al Beasley of Victoria has been elected to replace Bill Gibson of Vancouver as president of the association. Gibson, whose term still had two years to run, resigned because of business pressure.

Also elected to the executive were Earl Parsons of New Westminster, vice-president; Ed Charles of Port Alberni, registrar; and Dick Chan of Kamloops, commissioner-at-large.

The only member of the executive to retain his post was Percy "Pop" Simons, returned for a three-year term as treasurer, a position he has held since 1948.

Claremont, Oak Bay XVs In First B.C. Tourney

Teams from Claremont and Oak Bay, plus one from upper-Island still to be named, will compete in the first annual 12-team British Columbia high school rugby championship tournament in Vancouver on Nov. 26 and 27.

Schools from Vancouver, the Fraser Valley, the Kootenays, the Okanagan and the 100-Mile House areas will compete in the double-knockout tournament.

Claremont and Oak Bay are tied for first place with one game remaining in the first half of the Victoria Senior High School Rugby League schedule.

The third berth for the B.C. tournament will be decided on performances in the Vancouver Island high school championship to be decided within the next week.

Nanaimo, the upper-Island representative, plays Claremont, the defending Victoria League champion, at 3 p.m. today at Claremont, while Brentwood College and Shawnigan Lake clash at Shawnigan Lake to decide a mid-Island winner Saturday.

Winners will meet in the Island final next Tuesday.

Next games: Tonight — Vancouver at Boston; St. Louis at Montreal; California at Buffalo; Los Angeles at Philadelphia; Pittsburgh at Minnesota.

Vancouver Canucks, who completed a five-player trade this week in an attempt to gain scoring power, came up pointless Wednesday, bowing 3-0 to Chicago Black Hawks, leaders in the National Hockey League's Western Division.

Chicago's Tony Esposito was forced to make a brilliant stop against Dave Balon in the first minute of play and blocked a breakaway drive by Ron Stewart minutes later but was seldom tested seriously again on the way to his third shutout of the season.

Balon and Stewart were playing their first game in Vancouver colors after being traded with Wayne Connelly to the Canucks for Gary Doak and Jim Wiste. Connelly is expected to join the Canucks this weekend.

Vancouver, battling for a playoff spot in the Eastern Division, fell four points behind Toronto when the Leafs defeated Los Angeles Kings, 5-1, in the only other game.

Chicago now leads second-place Minnesota North Stars by four points in the Western Division.

Esposito, lowering Chicago's goal-against average to 1.56, got all the offensive support he needed in the first period when Pit Martin scored on Jim Pappin's goal-mouth pass.

Stan Mikita, scoring on his own rebound, and Dennis Hull completed the scoring.

Chicago's defence limited Vancouver to 18 shots, including a meagre two in the first period. Vancouver goalkeeper Dunc Wilson, who turned back several almost-certain goals in the first two periods, stopped 30 drives, including a last-period threat on a breakaway by Bobby Hull.

In Toronto, Ron Ellis scored two goals and assisted on a third-period goal by Paul Henderson to lead the Leafs past the hapless Kings, who suffered their 14th loss in 18 games to remain in the West Division cellar.

Dave Keon and Guy Trottier, with his first of the season, scored the other Toronto goals against Rogatien Vachon, making his fourth appearance for Kings since being acquired in a trade with Montreal Canadiens.

Vachon, peppered with 42 shots, made some brilliant saves to keep the score respectable.

Lucien Grenier's first goal of the season, on a third-period power play, ruined a shutout bid by Bernie Parent, who turned aside 29 other shots.

Leaf coach John McLellan was booed by partisan fans when, after sending top penalty-killer Denis Dupere to the box to serve a Bernie Parent misdemeanor, Los Angeles scored.

Leafs lost defenceman Rick Ley late in the game after he stopped a shot with his right knee. He was helped from the ice but did not require hospital treatment.

Phil Esposito Regains Lead

Boston Bruins, who are having their troubles in the National Hockey League Eastern Division race, at least have their top scorer in a familiar position.

Defending scoring champion Phil Esposito picked up nine points in three games during the last week to regain the lead from the New York Ranger pair of Vic Hadfield and Rod Gilbert.

Esposito, who has 13 goals and 17 assists, leads Hadfield by one point and is two up on Gilbert, last week's leader. Jean Ratelle, third member of the high-scoring Ranger line, broke a tie for fourth place with Bobby Orr of Boston by boosting his total to 26 points. Orr has a league-leading 18 assists as well as seven goals.

Veteran defenceman J. C. Tremblay of Montreal, who has yet to score a goal, is within one assist of Orr's total.

Another Montreal veteran, Frank Mahovlich, held to a single assist in Canadiens' 7-2 win against California Tuesday, leads in goals with 15, two more than Esposito. Hadfield, Gilbert and Montreal's Marc Tardif.

Chicago Black Hawks have recaptured the lead from Minnesota North Stars in the Vezina Trophy race. Goalkeepers Tony Esposito and Gary Smith, who have allowed rival snipers only four goals in eight games in Chicago Stadium, have a combined goals-against average of 1.56. The Minnesota duo of Gump Worsley and Cesare Maniago has allowed 29 goals in 17 games for a 1.71 goals-against average.

Nanaimo Ties Cubs

NANAIMO — Bill Bestwick's second goal of the third period, his third of the game, enabled Nanaimo Buccaneers to tie Victoria Cubs, 4-4, Wednesday night in a Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game here.

Bestwick scored at 6:14 of the final period to narrow the deficit to 4-3 and tied the game at 17:11. Jeff Ranger got the other Nanaimo goal.

Al McLaren, Rick LaPointe, Mark Purdy and Al Stocks scored for Cubs.

A brawl at 9:12 of the second period resulted in major penalties to Mel Bridgeman and Tom Conners of Victoria and Chuck Kingzett and Lindsay Thomson of Nanaimo with Bob Gold of the Bucs also drawing a misconduct penalty.

Mt. Douglas scored a converted try in the last few seconds Wednesday for a thrilling 6-4 victory over Victoria Titans in a Victoria Senior High Schools Rugby League match.

Titans, who tied for the league championship last season and just lost out to Claremont Spartans in the Howard Russell Cup final, took a 4-0 lead early in the second half with a try by No. 8 forward Dave Craven.

But standoff-half Neil Campbell dived over for a try handy to the posts in the dying seconds and fullback Rob Hutchinson converted for the winning points.

The victory lifted Mt. Douglas out of a three-way tie with Victoria and Mount View Hornets and into sole possession of third place, just two points behind Claremont and Oak Bay, who are tied for top spot.

Vic High plunged to fifth place as Mount View grabbed a point in the season's first draw — a 0-0 battle with winless Esquimalt.

After an even first half, Mount View dominated play in the second half but a series of knock-ons and stray passes at crucial moments cost them the game.

The Claremont-Reynolds match scheduled for Wednesday was postponed because of Claremont's game with Nanaimo today in the Vancouver Island championship semi-final.

However, Reynolds defeated a Claremont "B" team, 26-10, in an exhibition match.

Oak Bay, who drew the bye in the seven-team league, lost, 7-15, to St. Michael's University School in another exhibition match.

Explosive Offence Blasted Bombers Out of Red

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers rode the crest of the most explosive offence in the Canadian Football League in 1971 to the club's most successful season, both on and off the field, since 1966.

Although the club bowed out of the Western Conference playoff picture with a 34-23 semi-final loss to Saskatchewan Roughriders, general manager Earl Lunsford says the club "will make some money this year."

Bomber president Paul Quinton agreed the club will show a slight profit in 1971 but said the final figures, which will not be known for some time, will still leave the club in debt.

Lunsford, who disclosed prior to the regular season that the club was "flat busted" and with "thousands of dollars of overdrafts at the bank," said this will be the first profitable year since 1966.

It is also the first time the club has reached the playoffs since that date.

MORE SEATS NEEDED

Both Quinton and Lunsford said an additional 5000 seats between the goal lines, a subject now under discussion with Winnipeg city council, would have made a noticeable difference in the financial picture.

While Quinton did not estimate the value of the seats, Lunsford said if the club had the higher-priced seats during 1971, "with the same crowds we would have been out of debt."

"And we were about $100,000 in the red starting 1971."

"We've asked Winnipeg Enterprises (the stadium landlords) for the seats and hope to have them for 1972," Quinton said.

"But it's up to the Enterprises and city council."

DECISION DELAYED

A decision on the seats is not expected until the new Greater Winnipeg council takes over the city's operation in January. Winnipeg Enterprises is the public body operating the city-owned stadium and arena.

The same situation prevails with artificial turf, another feature the Bombers would like to have, but will have to wait for.

The club attracted on average home crowd of about 21,200 or 95-per-cent capacity, although they didn't assure themselves of a playoff berth until the final weekend of the schedule.

NO GIMMICKS WANTED

That situation backed up the statement by Lunsford that, in football, "the product is the thing."

"To hell with gimmicks; football fans want to see competitive football, nothing else," the former Calgary Stampeders fullback said prior to 1971.

"That's what we gave them this season, as well as the most exciting team the city has witnessed in several years."

Although the club finished third and failed in its bid to advance to the Grey Cup, the local fans responded in record fashion.

The season attendance reached 169,388, eclipsing the previous best of 153,789 in 1965, the last year the Bombers reached the Grey Cup final, losing, 22-16, to Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Riding the strong arm of quarterback Don Jones, the most valuable player in the West, the Bombers compiled a record of seven wins, the most since 1966, eight losses and one tie.

But the statistics that made the club a crowd-pleaser were team scoring, passing and total offence. Winnipeg led the country in all three with 366 points, one-third of those by Jonas, the WFC's individual scoring leader, 4,332 yards passing and 6,011 yarrs total offence.

Jonas directed the club on the field, but it was the mastermind of offensive coach Dave Smith that organized the offence that featured what Calgary coach Jim Duncan termed "high school plays."

But, as Bomber head coach Jim Spavital replied, "I love those high school plays" and so did the fans.

The Winnipeg front office said the success of the club on the field was due to the performance of the players. They cited newcomers such as Jonas; Jim Thorpe, the leading pass receiver in the West; Mack Herron, the smallest player in the CFL who set records for kickoff returns and was the club's leading rusher, and rookie Bobby Kraemer, a local boy who quarterbacked University of Manitoba Bisons to two consecutive national titles before turning pro and earning the wingback position.

And 1972 looks even brighter. Lunsford says that although season ticket sales haven't begun yet, the initial response has been great.

As Lunsford reiterated "We've been though the worst of the mire and we are on our way out."

Bronco Coach Steps Aside

DENVER (AP) — Lou Saban, head coach of the stumbling Denver Broncos, resigned from his coaching duties Wednesday and announced that Jerry Smith, the National Football League team's offensive line coach, will replace him.

Saban will remain the general manager.

"It is my choice and I feel at this time, my responsibility to the team, to step aside as general coach," Saban told a news conference.

Saban was reluctant to discuss specifically his reasons for stepping down. He said he had considered the move for several weeks "for many reasons."

Saban, who won the American Football League championships as head coach at Buffalo, could not put together a winning season with the Broncos since coming here in 1966.

Bruins, Seals Make Swap

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins announced Wednesday they have traded centre Ivan Boldirev to California Golden Seals for Centre Chris Oddliefson and a player to be named later.

Oddliefson, 21, a 180-pound right wing was on loan from the Seals to the Bruins' Oklahoma City affiliate in the Central Hockey League.

The Bruins said he will remain with Oklahoma City on loan from the Boston National Hockey League club.

Boldirev, 22, has been used sparingly by the Bruins this year. He has appeared in 11 games and has two assists.

He is a third-year pro, who played with Oklahoma City the last two seasons. The Bruins brought him to Boston for the last two games last year.

Kison

Only Three-Quarter Share For Pirates' Young Hero

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Kison, the hero of the first night game in world series history, was given only a three-quarter share by the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates, baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Wednesday.

The 21-year-old right-hander, who was called up by the Pirates in mid-season and compiled a 6-5 record before his world series heroics, was voted $13,623.44 by his teammates. A full share was worth $18,164.58. The vote was taken before the series.

STRONG IN RELIEF

Kison relieved starter Luke Walker in the first inning of the fourth world series game against Baltimore on Oct. 13 and blanked the slugging Orioles one hit over six and one-third innings. He left in the seventh inning for pinch hitter Milt May, who delivered the game-winning hit in a 4-3 Pittsburgh triumph.

Kison was credited with the victory, tying the series 2-2. Pittsburgh then went on to win the championship in seven games.

Over-all, the Pirates voted 31 full shares from their pot of $627,237.11 of the world series and championship series receipts.

They went to 23 players, manager Danny Murtaugh, five coaches, trainer Tony Bartirome and clubhouse manager John Hallahan.

They also voted several smaller shares, but did not give any money to their ground crew. The ground crew had received a full share to split last year when the Pirates won the National League's East Division title.

Meanwhile, the Orioles also voted 31 full shares of $13,906.45 from their total earnings of $470,427.84. They gave a one-tenth share to Jay Mazzone, their crippled batboy whose hands were burned off in a childhood accident. The 18-year-old Mazzone retired after the 1971 season. He had held the batboy's job for four years.

Giants Lose Star Back

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Johnson, who gained 1027 yards last season to become the first New York Giant player to crack the 1,000-yard barrier, will be lost to the club for the remainder of the 1971 National Football League season due to torn cartilage in his left knee.

Johnson injured his knee in the game against San Diego Chargers Nov. 7. It was first thought to be a minor leg injury, but when the knee remained stiff during the past week, further examination by team physician Dr. Anthony Pisani showed a torn cartilage.

Johnson will be operated on today or Wednesday to repair the damage.

Orioles Walloped

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — Japan's champion Tokyo Yomiuri Giants, teaming with the Nagoya Chunichi Dragons, walloped Baltimore, 9-1, Wednesday with utility infielder Jerry DaVannon of the Orioles pitching three and one-third innings in relief.

The Japanese rapped out 14 hits including a home run. Starter Mitsuo Inaba and reliever Hisatoshi Ito held the American League champions to four scattered hits.

The setback was Baltimore's second in 17 games. The Orioles' record in Japan is 11 victories, two defeats and four ties.

Scots Settle On Docherty For Manager

GLASGOW (Reuter) — Tommy Docherty, one of the most controversial figures in British soccer, has accepted the appointment as full-time manager of the Scottish national team for the next four years.

James Aitken, chairman of Scotland's international selection committee, said: "I am happy to announce that a satisfactory conclusion has been reached and that Mr. Docherty will take up his post on Monday."

Terms have not been announced, but newspaper reports said Docherty will be paid about $72,000 for the four-year period.

Earlier this season, Docherty was appointed Scotland's temporary manager. Under his guidance Scotland beat both Portugal and Belgium in European championship matches.

A very simple test only one color TV can pass:

Most color TV manufacturers offer automatic fine tuning. Including Electrohome. (We call ours "Electrolok.")

But not all automatic fine tuning is totally automatic. Electrolok is.

In fact, Electrolok is the only automatic fine tuning that locks in the best possible picture. Instantly. Every time.

Try this simple test:

Turn the set on, pick a channel, and manually fine tune until you get the crispest, clearest picture possible. Now manually tune it out. Way out. The way a sticky-fingered five-year-old or an inquisitive neighbour might. Then touch the Electrolok button.

Instantly the picture comes back crisp and clear. And stays that way.

Try it on other color sets with automatic fine tuning, and you may find the set can't catch up to your dial-twisting. Electrolok locks in fine tuning for good every time—and that's the difference.

There's more to Electrohome color TV than Electrolok, however. Electrohome's exclusive and patented automatic color control. We call it Electrotint. It locks color balance in to stay, scene to scene, channel to channel. Every time.

All-electronic slide tuning changes channels with the touch of a finger.

And Deilcraft cabinetry means the set looks beautiful on or off.

But the most startling differences are the automatic ones. Electrolok automatic fine tuning. And Electrotint automatic color control.

Visit an Electrohome dealer and try our automatic tuning test for yourself. It's the only place to try the test.

Because it's the only place with the color TV that will pass the test.

Mayoralty Candidate Scott:

Change Business Tax Basis

New basis for setting business taxes in Victoria was suggested Wednesday by mayoralty candidate Bill Scott, the lighthouse philosopher.

Scott said in a statement that "the homeowner and lower income group have too long been subsidizing the rich tax evaders with the permission of their governments and themselves, and that only by putting a stop to it can the financial health of Victoria and other municipalities improve."

He suggested that business tax be based on the gross revenue of the business, probably calculated as a percentage tax of one-half of 1 per cent of that revenue.

At present, the Municipal Act states that business taxes may be a percentage of the rental value of the business property or a percentage of the taxable value of personal property used in the business.

Scott said that a tax based on gross revenue "is the fairest way of taxing businesses," and cited several examples to show that some small businesses were being overtaxed while other larger ones were not paying their fair share.

Tourist promotion or a convention centre could conceivably be financed out of a proper business tax, he said, because the tax would give the city more money than it receives from the business tax.

Scott also suggested that students in school and universities be given the opportunity to work to earn one dollar a day to go toward their education costs.

Ways they could earn the money, he said, would include each school operating a type of farm, recycling and junk collecting, garbage collection, helping in parks, cleaning beaches and streets, reducing the crow population, assisting in hospitals, and selling sea urchins and kelp.

The money which they would then pay would cover a large proportion of the municipal education cost, he said.

Scott declined to take part in a forum for election candidates being proposed by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce because only members of the news media were going to be the questioners.

U.S. Bombs North

SAIGON (UPI) — Four U.S. fighter-bombers attacked North Vietnamese anti-aircraft sites 47 miles north of the demilitarized zone Wednesday, destroying one and damaging another, the U.S. command said today.

The command said the 77th so-called "protective reaction" strike of the year was called in after North Vietnamese gunners fired at U.S. planes and bombing of the nearby Ho Chi Minh trail complex in Laos, which has declared neutrality in the Indochina war.

U.S. military spokesmen said the attack by the four F4 Phantoms occurred "in the vicinity of the Ban Karai Pass, just inside the border of north Vietnam," about 47 miles north of the DMZ.

U.S. sources earlier in the week described the area as one of three in which the North Vietnamese have stockpiled hundreds of tons of war material for shipment through Laos to South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Weight-Measure Cases Wrapped in Arguments

First of two trials involving federal Weights and Measures Act charges against Saanich merchants got all wrapped up in legal technicalities Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court — and the result was neither trial was completed.

Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre reserved judgment until Friday after the trial of a two-count charge against Parkland Meat Co., operator of Wakeham's Quality Meats, 2564 Sinclair.

The two counts, dated on or about May 7, alleged a three-pound, 3¼-ounce cross rib roast sold for $3.60 to Herbert Mills Underwood was represented as being three pounds, 10 ounces and a 15-ounce porterhouse steak sold for $1.80 to Underwood was represented as being one pound.

Underwood, one of the crown witnesses, is an inspector in the federal consumer affairs department.

St. Jorre set the case to Friday so he can consider legal arguments by prosecutor Ian Stewart and defence lawyer Donald Gray over a number of technical matters such as wording of the law, merits of legal tables and court precedents.

The other case was a two-count charge against Peter Seto of The Food Palace, 2 West Gorge. Dated on or about May 4, it alleged a one-pound, 14¾-ounce chicken sold for $1.39 to Underwood was represented as being two pounds, 0 ounces, and 13¼ ounces of potato salad sold for 65 cents to Underwood was represented as being one pound, 0 ounces.

Only brief evidence was heard and the case was remanded for completion later.

Ferry, Tug Collide

SEATTLE (AP) — A Washington State ferry collided in Puget Sound Wednesday with a tugboat and barge, but coast guard and ferry system officials said damage was minor and there were no injuries.

A spokesman for the ferry system said the Kahleetan had been withdrawn from service temporarily until it could be inspected by the coast guard. It was en route to Winslow on Bainbridge Island when it scraped against the other vessels, a spokesman said.

Even at these BLIZZARD OF BARGAINS prices you get our

NO-GIMMICK GUARANTEE

No time limit. No mileage limit. No gobbledegook.

This guarantee is different. We go all the way to make sure you are satisfied.

1. YOUR TIRE WILL BE REPLACED FREE within the first 20% of tread life, if a defect in workmanship or materials causes failure. That's right. Free.

2. From then on, YOU PAY ONLY FOR THE TREAD YOU HAVE USED. Let's say you have problems when you have used up two-thirds of the tread. All you pay is two-thirds of the warranty price at the time of replacement.

3. The guarantee has run its course when the tread is worn down to the 2/32" safety wear bar indicators. Why? Because government safety people say tires shouldn't be used with so little tread. That's why the government regulated that all tires should have wear bars moulded into the base of the tread.

4. What about ROAD HAZARD DAMAGE, such as a cut, snag, bruise or puncture?

You'll agree that such damage is certainly not our fault. We don't go around scattering broken glass on the road! BUT we will still replace tires damaged by road hazards if they can't be repaired. Replacement cost is based on tread wear, as in item 2, above.

But if you pick up a repairable puncture, we'll ask you to pay the repair costs. That seems fair.

5. An important point; NO SALES SLIP IS NEEDED. We think it's ridiculous to expect you to keep track of your sales slip for a year or two, as most tire guarantees insist.

6. Another big difference. This guarantee is GOOD ANYWHERE IN CANADA OR THE U.S.A. If you're on a trip to the other end of Canada, or if you're in El Paso, Texas, your guarantee will be treated with respect. By any Firestone Store or Dealer. With no delays or quibbling.

Many tire guarantees must be taken to the dealer from whom the tires were purchased. That may be okay . . . for stay-at-homes.

7. The only exceptions are fair and logical. See if you don't agree.

Racing drivers who tear up a drag strip can tear up their guarantee too.

So can truck operators who overload passenger tires.

And if your wheels are out of alignment, you can't blame the tires if they are abused to an early death.

This guarantee is to protect motorists who use passenger tires for what they were designed for . . . and who take reasonable care of their cars.

8. One word sums up this No-Gimmick Guarantee. It's fair.

WE THINK IT'S WHAT CONSUMERS WANT. AND DESERVE.

Alaska Oil Tanker Route Report

Scenario for Disaster

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A report prepared for the Alaska Coast Commission says the route oil tankers must take to reach trans-Alaska pipeline terminals at Valdez contains "numerous hazards" and "poorly marked or unmarked approaches."

The study, prepared by Grumman Ecosystems Corp., says many of the approaches to Prince William Sound have not been resurveyed for navigational hazards since the Great Alaska earthquake in 1964.

The 210-page document, submitted as the first part of a four-part study, says while 22 federal and eight state agencies have some responsibility for management of the sound, none of them is in charge.

Grumman prepared three "Development scenarios," each a projection of what might happen in the Valdez area until 1980.

In the "most likely scenario, the city of Valdez will reach a maximum population of 2,000 by the end of the decade — about double its present population — and exploitation of mineral and timber resources in the area will increase as transportation links are established.

But, in a "disaster scenario," Grumman outlines a quite different picture it says is "believable, but not likely to occur."

It pictures an earthquake similar to that of 1964 occurring in the area in 1976. It says while the oil pipeline would be ruptured, little petroleum would be lost or spilled because of automatic check valves and other safety devices.

However, the scenario envisages an oil tanker grounding in the area because of the shock, leaving "a massive residual oil slick" with effects reaching until 1977.

In addition, it pictures public outrage over the spill eventually resulting in rerouting of the pipeline, probably to Seward or Homer, with the Alyeska Pipline Service Co. still seeking new state and federal relocation permits by the end of the decade. The pipeline would be shut down for four years.

The third scenario, describing a possible, but unlikely, economic boom situation, foresees Japanese investment in the sound, construction of shorthaul rail links to newly-discovered mineral resources, with Valdez swelling to nearly 5,000 persons by 1978.

By the end of the decade, the report says, the boom cycle could have given the area an additional 7,000 persons living on an employment base of oil, minerals, fishing, recreation and government service. "All the scenarios indicate that oil transport represents the most serious threat foreseen in probability and magnitude to the natural resources and environment of Prince William Sound," the company wrote.

"Accordingly, management plans, programs and organization structures for the region must primarily be adopted to be timely and responsible to the oil industry development."

Prince William Sound, it says, is very deep but contains islands, rocks and shoals as hazards to navigation.

"Off-lying dangers in the approaches to the sound are Middleton Island, Wessels Reef, and Seal Rocks," Grumman says.

"As with most of the hazards in the sound, these dangers are poorly marked, or unmarked.

"Since many of the depths and rocks of the sound have yet to be resurveyed following the 1964 earthquake, the unmarked hazards are particularly dangerous."

Port Valdez, it says, offers good shelter for supertankers with ample room for turning. However, there are no safe natural anchorages "due to the great depth of water, which exceeds 800 feet in places, and soft bottom."

"With the completion of the trans-Alaska pipeline, Valdez will become one of the world's major oil ports with between two and eight supertankers of up to 250,000 tons loading and departing each week," the report says.

"Concern about the possible impact of this development on the natural attributes of the area is heightened by the fact that Prince William Sound was the epicentre of the disastrous 1964 Alaska earthquake.

"Prince William Sound thus epitomizes the confrontation between economic development and conservation, that has become one of the major issues of the day."

The state, the report said, should take charge of the sound's development, and two agencies should be created — a Prince William Sound port authority responsible for navigation controls—and other management functions, and a state department of marine and coastal resources with regulatory authority for the state's entire coastal zone.

At a minimum, it says, the state should be sure that contingency planning is available to adequately prepare for the worst eventuality — including simultaneous earthquake, tsunami tidal wave, oil spills and fire.

Meanwhile, Alaska's commissioner of environmental conservation said the state considers the report "one of the poorest examples of selective use of data to back up a preconceived notion that we've run into."

PROVINCIAL COURT

Two drivers facing separate charges drew tongue-lashings Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court from Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

The judge said to Gary Michael Fletcher, 22, of 887 Cloverdale: "You are the type of driver that we've got to get off the road because you're a menace to yourself and others."

Fletcher pleaded guilty to a charge of driving Tuesday in Victoria with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent and prosecutor J. W. Anderson said Fletcher had a record of one similar offence and two impaired-driving convictions in the past two years.

St. Jorre sentenced Fletcher to 21 days in jail and added a one-year driving ban.

□

To Allan Charles Roberts, 20, of 815 Princess, the judge said: "It's a fortunate thing for you that you are standing erect in Provincial Court instead of lying prone at the undertaker's."

Roberts pleaded guilty to two Victoria charges laid early Wednesday — dangerous driving and driving without insurance. Anderson said Roberts was testing an uninsured car he had thought of buying and took part in a downtown race at speeds of up to 80 miles an hour.

For what St. Jorre called "just crazy driving," Roberts was fined $400 and given a partial one-year driving ban on the first charge and fined $250 on the second.

□

A suspended sentence and 18-month probationary term were set for Yvonne Annette Cotter, 22, of 1158 Yates, who pleaded guilty Nov. 3 to a three-count Victoria charge of theft involving less than $50.

She admitted taking a $14 coat and some papers from former residents of the apartment building where she lived, along with two sweaters from a patient at the private hospital where she worked.

St. Jorre added two conditions to the probation: that Miss Cotter abstain from alcohol and move to Quesnel "forthwith" to live with a brother.

□

Bail was set at $3,000 by St. Jorre for Harry Ronald Moore, 20, of 3880 Shelbourne, charged with possession of heroin Tuesday in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking. Moore elected trial by judge and jury and his preliminary hearing was set for Dec. 30.

□

Mrs. Shirley Wheeler, 41, of 2474 Millstream, was fined $250 after she pleaded guilty to a charge of theft involving less than $50 — a $13.88 child's jacket removed Saturday from Wooleo.

□

In traffic court, two persons were fined $300 each and given partial three-month driving bans after pleading guilty before Judge E. F. N. Robinson to separate charges of driving in the Colwood area with a blood-alcohol reading over .08 per cent. They were Randolf Barnard Martens, 38, of 495 Tribune, stopped Oct. 29, and Antonio Alexander Gleas, 18, of 4357 Metchosin, stopped Oct. 23.

□

In the same court Tuesday, Charles Ivan Wightman, 52, of 4101 Tyndall, was fined $350 and given a partial four-month driving ban after he was found guilty following a trial on a charge of impaired driving Sept. 23 in Victoria.

Museum Project Financed

Provincial Museum's Project 70 displays have received $47,500 in contributions from business and industry in the Greater Victoria area, museum director Dr. J. Bristol Foster announced Wednesday.

He said the project is the museum's exhibit program for the 1970s and the money has been received or promised to the Friends of the Provincial Museum, a society that supports museum endeavours.

Foster said that participation by businesses, industries, and other institutions in the exhibit program gives them the opportunity to identify with some aspect of the province's history.

He forecast that more than 40 million people will see the exhibits during the next 20 years. They include replicas of B.C. buildings as they were 100 years ago.

Amounts contributed and the displays for which they are intended are:

Eaton's, $10,000, for a clothier store display; The Bay, $10,000 for a fur trade gallery; Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, $15,000 for a gold rush gallery; Canadian Pacific Railway, $10,000 for a railroad station display; McGill and Orme Ltd., $2,500 for a drug store display.

Man Sets Self Afire

PARIS (UPI) — A man sat down in the courtyard of France's Palace of Justice Tuesday, doused himself with gasoline and struck a match. Police said Sydney Bertin suffered severe leg burns before palace guards could put out the flames. Motivation for his action was not known.

LAST DAY

STEPS FOR HEALTH — 88-YEAR-OLD RETIRED DENTIST DR. JEROME G. HESS gave up his dentistry practice after 42 years because of his declining health in 1952.

Nine years later he started taking dancing lessons to get some regular exercise and ward off the aging process. It evidently worked. Last year Hess won a national fox-trot and tango title in Miami, Fla., and now — at the age of 88 — is training hard to defend his title in April. "I'll be ready," promised the retired dentist, who has been going to Fred Astaire Studios twice a week for lessons since 1965.

Soldiers Target But Boy Wounded

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A 14-year-old boy, playing hooky from school, was shot and seriously wounded Wednesday when a sniper with a machinegun opened fire on British troops who were clearing away Roman Catholic-built barricades, the army said.

An army statement said the soldiers did not return the fire but angry crowds from the Roman Catholic Bogside district shouted "murderers" at the troops. The soldiers used rubber bullets and CS nausea gas to disperse them.

A bomb exploded in a Belfast hardware store owned by Northern Ireland Health Minister William Fitzsimmons, injuring two women passersby with flying debris, police said. It was the third blast in the store in two years.

In London, Home Secretary Reginald Maudling said during a three-hour House of Commons emergency debate that no one in the House would "be impartial as between those who kill to destroy the law and those who die to defend it."

"It is necessary to take vigorous measures to fight enemies — the terrorists and murderers," said Maudling. "A battle is joined."

But James Callaghan, Labor opposition spokesman for home affairs, said "It is not enough to win the battle against the IRA if you lose the battle to reconcile the minority in Northern Ireland."

Robert Canning, playing truant from school and due to celebrate his 15th birthday next week, was hit when a gunman with a Thompson submachinegun fired three bursts of 20 shots at the troops.

He fell to the rain-soaked pavement, gushing blood from neck and chest wounds. Bystanders waved down a passing car to rush him to Altnagelvin Hospital, where he was reported in serious condition.

"The boy was in a group standing between troops and the gunman," the army statement said. "He was shot when the gunman opened fire with a machinegun. Troops did not fire back and at no time today have soldiers fired live ammunition in Londonderry."

'Battle Is Joined'

LONDON (UPI) — The British government said Wednesday the "battle is joined" against the outlawed Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland.

"No one in this House can be impartial as between those who kill to destroy the law and those who die to defend it," Home Secretary Reginald Maudling told the House of Commons.

"It is necessary to take vigorous measures to fight enemies — the terrorists and murderers," Maudling said. "We must recognize them for what they are. They are criminals who wish to impose their own will by violence and terror and methods condemned by virtually everyone of any responsibility.

"They are opposed, front to front, to the army and the police who are trying to maintain law and order. A battle is joined."

In Dublin, the IRA issued new accusations Wednesday night of alleged brutalities by British troops against prisoners in Northern Ireland.

A statement by the militant provisional wing of the IRA said a former prisoner who was examinined at Belfast's Mater Hospital was found to be "badly burned from the navel to his genitals. The soles of his feet were also badly burned."

In Belfast, with Irish republicans accusing the British army of torturing prisoners, the British news agency Press Association said Wednesday the IRA committed atrocities on men convicted by secret IRA "kangaroo courts."

A Press Association newsman said he and a photographer were shown medical photographs from official sources" of one IRA torture victim.

Small Business

What is apparently smallest store in downtown Victoria measures 58 inches by 75 inches, according to operator Margaret Christensen, 462 Goward, opened for business Tuesday. Tiny shop will feature silhouettes in oil.

Democrats Seek Anderson Views

David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, has been asked to state his views on the proposed Alaska oil pipeline-tanker route before the Democratic reform committee of the Democratic party in Washington, D.C.

The committee is considered one of the most influential legislative bodies in the U.S.

Anderson, who is trying to intervene in a court action aimed at stopping oil from being shipped down Canada's West Coast, said Wednesday he is very pleased to be able to address the committee.

"I doubt that many Canadians get an opportunity for such a forum," he said.

Anderson will state his case before the committee Friday. Composed of 60 state senators, governors and representatives, the committee is responsible for a large part of reform legislation proposed by the Democratic Party.

$42,440 in Projects

Region Will Try Federal Purse

Capital Regional Board hopes to get the federal government's approval for $42,440 worth of special projects to be carried out under Ottawa's make-work incentive program.

The board's public works committee decided Wednesday that federal assistance be asked for a number of parks and sewage projects.

The parks program, estimated to cost $20,720, would include trail cutting, landscaping, surveying and parking lot clearing at East Sooke and Horth Hill parks.

Also included would be the landscaping of sewage pumping stations in the region. The federal government's share would be $14,040, with the region paying $6,680.

The sewage project would cost an estimated $21,720 and would consist of surveying the amount of storm water flowing into the sewage system that leads to Macaulay Point.

The board suspects that, in time, the installation of additional storm sewers will be inevitable if the Macaulay Point outfall is not to be overtaxed. Designed primarily for sewage disposal, the outfall accommodates far too much storm water, the board believes.

The federal government's share of this project would be $14,360. The region would pay the remaining $7,360.

Under the terms of the federal assistance program, Ottawa will pay 75 peg cent the "on-site" labor costs of projects approved. All other costs must be borne by the municipality or region. The terms also specify that projects must be completed before May 31, 1972.

Kettles Out Dec. 10

The Salvation Army's Christmas Kettles will appear on Victoria streets from Dec. 10 to Christmas Eve and Victorians preferring to mail donations to the Salvation Army's Christmas Fund will be receiving letters this week.

The fund finances the food hampers and toys given to needy families as well as more than 1,800 individual treats distributed to hospitals and institutions at Christmas time throughout the Greater Victoria area.

Victorians needing assistance may contact the Army early at 386-6306 as there is a limit on the number of hampers the Army can provide.

B.C. Conservationist Urges:

Bottle Battle: Do It by Law

A leading B.C. conservationist says the only complete solution to the problem of recycling beer and pop bottles in Canada is a federal law requiring the use of standarized bottles.

Elton Anderson of Victoria, vice-president of the Federation of B.C. Naturalists, said in an interview Wednesday that without a federal law, private industry would always bring in a non-standarized bottle such as the keg-shaped Heidelberg beer bottles which were difficult and expensive to recycle.

Anderson was commenting on the news that Canadian Breweries, which puts out the bottle, and the B.C. Liquor Control Board will be having talks in Victoria Tuesday about the future of the distinctively-shaped bottle in B.C.

Alan Branston, president of Canadian Breweries, said he called the LCB Monday when he heard that Heidelberg Brewing Co. of Ontario — a division of Canadian Breweries — would have to use a standard bottle.

"We asked for the meeting because the whole issue of recycling has become an important fact of life, one which must be taken into serious consideration," he said.

William Bruce, LCB chairman, said in an interview Tuesday that although B.C. was not going to standardize bottles at present, the government had been thing about it.

"We have tried to get Ottawa to put in a law requiring the use of standard beer and pop bottles," Anderson said. "We wrote to Ron Basford, minister of consumer and corporate affairs, but we haven't got a reply yet."

Anderson said a federal law was necessary because "otherwise some private industry will sneak in with some design or other" such as the Heidelberg bottle.

As a result, he said, "the cheap and highly efficient distribution system in the brewing industry is threatened with the same sort of chaos (that exists in the soft drink industry) since mavericks within it have violated the voluntary agreement to use a standard bottle."

"For our own protection it should be done by law," he said.

The law should apply to both pop and beer bottles to be effective, Anderson said.

He said the standard beer bottle had a return rate of about 96 per cent, while in the past people had failed to return bottles of different design.

Convicts Crash Out in Homemade Tank

RAIFORD, Fla. (UPI) — Two convicts rammed through the Raiford Prison's gates in a homemade, bullet-proof "tank" Saturday, prison officials said Wednesday. They are still looking for the fugitives.

They recovered the "tank," which was a fork-lift truck hastily covered with 10-gauge sheet-metal that deflected tower guards' bullets in the escape.

The fugitives were identified as Rex Gyger, serving two years for escape, and Wallace McDonald, 43, serving 10 years for robbery.

Prison superintendent L. E. Dugger said the two men broke into the prison furniture factory last Saturday and made their tank.

"They put two thicknesses of the metal all the way around and four thicknesses on top," he said. "They cut a slit in front where they could see through."

When darkness fell, the two men climbed into the tank and rumbled forth, heading for the nearest exit, a back-to-back set of two cyclone-fence gates.

The guard in a tower directly overlooking the gates fired five rounds from a 30-30 rifle at the weird contraption, all of which bounced off.

Two other tower guards opened fire, also to no avail.

The tank smashed right through the first gate and still had enough momentum to knock open the second gate.

It took about 20 minutes, Dugger said, to get up a search party and by that time all that could be found was the tank, left just outside the second gate. Officers using dogs tracked the fugitives briefly but lost the trail.

Dugger said he has ordered that all fork-lifts and similar heavy equipment be parked outside the fence at night and over the weekends.

'Octopus Measure'

Tory Party Rejects Screen Idea

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative party could not accept a screening agency for foreign investment as outlined in a leaked government report published last week, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Wednesday.

Stanfield called the recommendation, which the government approved at least tentatively in principle last July, an "octopus measure" which the provinces obviously aren't willing to agree to.

Speaking to reporters outside the Commons, the Conservative leader said his party's position is that excessive foreign ownership in Canada is a serious problem, but that it should be dealt with by encouraging Canadians to invest more in their own economy.

He did not, however, rule out the possibility of tightening some controls over foreign ownership, perhaps by extending the key sector concept whereby foreign investment is limited by law in certain fields.

The screening-agency recommendation was contained in a confidential study prepared under the supervision of Revenue Minister Herb Gray, a synopsis of which was released last Friday by Canadian Forum, a Toronto monthly magazine.

On Tuesday a second document was published by the Montreal Gazette, showing that the government had approved the screening-agency concept in principle at a cabinet meeting July 29.

Stanfield told reporters the fact that the government has not gone ahead with such controls over foreign investment suggests that it has at least deferred its plans.

Wednesday's Commons question period did little to shed further light on the issue, as opposition questioners restricted themselves mainly to queries on how the government is investigating the leaks.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Canada and the U.S., at least to his knowledge, have not discussed the contents of the leaks.

Prime Minister Trudeau had said earlier outside the House that investigations on information leaks had started last week.

He added in an interview that he hoped an announcement can be made this fall, but a lot would depend on U.S. economic moves.

Opposition Forces United:

Tax Bill Too Tough On Mistake Makers

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and opposition MPs joined forces Wednesday to attack the government tax bill for being too tough on tax evaders and taxpayers who make mistakes.

Following a concerted attack on the bill's penalty provisions led by Douglas Hogarth, Liberal member for New Westminster, and Gordon Aiken, Conservative MP for Parry Sound-Muskoka, it was agreed that one subclause penalizing tax evaders be set aside for future consideration.

Aiken, an Ontario lawyer, said that under one section a taxpayer could be made to pay half again as much tax if the government found he had made a mistake on his tax form. And he could be fined again, a similar amount, under another section of the bill.

Hogarth, parliamentary secretary to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, said that if all penalty provisions in the bill were brought to bear against a delinquent taxpayer or evader, a person could pay up to $15,000 in fines on tax of $5,000.

Beside the two penalty clauses mentioned by Aiken, he said, a taxpayer could be made to pay $25 a day for every day he was late paying his taxes.

The penalties added up to a situation "contrary to normal justice" Aiken said. The tax department should be prevented from charging an evader under more than one of the bill's penalty sections.

The fact that evaders would be fined under one section by 50 per cent of the tax to be paid, rather than the current fine of 25 per cent, "compounds the unfairness."

'UN Needs Staff Cut in Half'

NEW YORK (UPI) — A top UN official called Wednesday for "shock treatment" — including staff cuts of up to 50 per cent — to revitalize the world organization.

Maurice Strong, the Canadian secretary-general of the UN conference on the human environment, described the United Nations as "a flagging organization which is somehow out of tune with the needs and the moods of the times."

Strong, in a speech prepared for delivery at the national foreign trade convention, urged "a major consolidation and regrouping" within the nearly bankrupt United Nations.

"This must be no cosmetic surgery," he said.

"It would require some drastic staff reduction — up to 50 per cent in some areas."

Jaywalkers Find Police Watching —With Tickets

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

So you're downtown shopping and you cut across View from the Woolworth store to Eaton's so you can save a few seconds and a policeman hands you a ticket for jaywalking and you get mad.

After all, why did the police choose this week as pedestrian safety week and why did they pick the downtown shopping area and especially why did they pick on you?

The fact that you were breaking the law and could have been killed has nothing to do with it. Or does it?

In Victoria so far this year, six persons have died in traffic accidents and four of the victims were pedestrians. To the end of September, traffic accidents injured 507 persons — 79 of them pedestrians.

While this is officially Pedestrian Safety Week in the capital region, Victoria police explained that the crackdown this week on jaywalking and walking against a do-not-walk signal is a periodic event throughout the year. Usually, there are half a dozen such crackdowns each year.

Inspector Richard Berry, head of the traffic division, said police checks on walkers are normally stepped up at this time of year as Christmas shopping starts to accelerate.

Monday through Wednesday, police handed violation tickets to 210 persons for jaywalking or violating a do-not-walk signal. Another 380 persons were warned as they were about to leave the curb on illegal journeys.

Each ticket costs $2.50, which must be paid within a month. If not, a summons is issued and the illegal walker has to go to court. He can either ride there, or walk.

Gifts for Policeman

About 50 men of Esquimalt, Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay police departments and area RCMP met at Carlton Club, Esquimalt Road, Wednesday night to honor 17-year Esquimalt policeman Bob Duncan, left, who retired this year due to illness that required two open heart operations. Ken Horsman, right, of Victoria police union, presents two of many gifts.

Nitinat Triangle's Future

Park Stand Coming

Next month, the Capital Regional Board will take a definite stand on whether or not the Nitinat Triangle should become part of the new Pacific Rim National Park.

Indications are the board will favor preserving an area, smaller than the one originally proposed, as a park, but under an area, smaller than the one originally proposed, as a park, but under provincial jurisdiction.

The Capital Regional Board isn't directly involved in the Nitinat Triangle question, but it has been asked by the Saanichan Regional Board to go on record in favor of including the triangular section of land in the Nitinat area in the new national park.

The plan favored by the Capital Regional Board has been proposed by the B.C. Sierra Club. The club recommended that only three lakes in the area be included in the park.

This proposal is also backed by the B.C. Wildlife Federation, but was rejected by the Council of the Forest Industries of British Columbia.

The Nitinat Triangle, the council said, contained "some of the most productive forest land in Canada." To use it for parks purposes only would have serious economic ramifications.

The capital region's parks committee decided Wednesday to table its decision on whether or not to support the Sierra Club proposal until all board directors have had the opportunity to study the issue in detail.

Central Saanich Mayor A. M. Galbraith told the committee he would recommend that the board support the Sierra Club proposal, but that the Nitinat Triangle not become part of the national park.

"I believe it should come under the jurisdiction of the provincial government. That would allow the construction of road access to the park which is not permitted by the federal government.

Cumming Will Seek Fourth Term at Top

North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming will seek his fourth term of office in the Dec. 11 civic elections, he announced Wednesday. He was first elected mayor of the Saanich Peninsula municipality six years ago.

If re-elected he said he will maintain good government, keep taxes as low as possible, and avoid incurring debt. He stressed that North Saanich with its mill rate of 19½ has the lowest rate of the three peninsula municipalities.

B.C. Labor Convention

Unknowns Symbols Of Changing World

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

VANCOUVER — Hugh Peebles of Victoria and Virginia Reimer of Vancouver do not really know one another.

But for a little while Wednesday they served as a symbol of the changing world in which organized labor finds itself — a world in which new objectives must sometimes take precedence over the old.

Peebles has hair that is almost shoulder-length. It is much longer than Virginia's hair.

And therein lies the key.

The B.C. Federation of Labor has gone on record as defending the rights of men like Peebles to wear long hair.

Speaking Out

And the federation, with Peebles among those speaking out, is set to do what it can to win equality for Virginia Reimer and all the other women who find themselves in the workday world.

Both the polite and friendly Peebles and the attractive, dead serious Virginia made their points on separate microphones Wednesday as delegates to the 16th annual convention of the federation steered labor toward two fresh battlegrounds — one concerning human rights and the other, the rights of women.

The federation pledged itself to a program in which it is to do all it can for the "disadvantaged" people in and out of labor unions — the working poor, welfare recipients, youth, pensioners, unemployed and those faced with discrimination because of race, sex, age or otherwise.

Kept Separate

The plight of women is being kept separate from the field of human rights because the federation deems it a virtual issue of the times that must be dealt with on its own.

It has nothing to do with the fact that the labor movement has its "hard hats" and "red necks" who would be reluctant to apply the human label to women.

Sad evidence of this is supplied by some of the convention delegates.

The barbs are intended mainly for unionists in the U.S. as the convention continues in a mood of anti-Americanism which has been evident since it began Monday.

Policy Paper

Clay Perry, research director for the western Canada region of the International Woodworkers of America, touched on this when he told delegates the policy paper on human rights was the most important piece of business facing the convention and "calls for us to have a look at ourselves and do a little thinking."

He said labor and other classes of people in need in the U.S. had been divided.

"I would almost say the establishment in the U.S. has convinced the labor movement it is part of the establishment and that, as part of the establishment, it must protect the status quo," Perry said.

This Reason

It is for this reason, he believes, that American labor appears to have turned against youth.

He warned that Canada is "about five years behind the United States" in almost everything, including shoe styles, adding: "I think we ought to be careful that the other trend we see in the States does not take effect here."

While the policy paper received much praise from the convention floor, there are some delegates who say privately that it seems to be little more than a hard, old-fashioned attack on the establishment — something that blames all ills on government, business, unfair taxes, and certain individuals.

One Official

Outside the meeting, one articulate labor official said: "Human rights is not something you approach with bitter speech. Yet this policy paper is full of bitterness."

The policy paper says the federation is concerned "about the concerted effort on the part of some politicians, columnists and open-line broadcasters to create division in our community between trade unionists, the working poor and those forced to live on social assistance."

It says that in the coming year the federation must undertake an education program within the union movement and throughout the community and must improve liaison with groups representing the disadvantaged.

Direct Action

One of those moved to take direct action was Jack Phillips, a Canadian Union of Public Employees representative in Vancouver.

He said if the disadvantaged would agree to arm themselves with signs and picket any columnists or hotliners considered "to be offending the poor," the unionists would "bloody well help you do it."

Among recommendations put forward by the federation's human rights committee and endorsed by delegates was one calling for the province to appoint an ombudsman.

Resolutions passed included one put forward by the 25-year-old Peebles through his union, the service employees, calling for an amendment to the Human Rights Act which would make it unlawful to discriminate against anyone for hair style "or any manner of attire whatsoever."

Seminar Call

A number of recommendations aimed at improving the status of women was endorsed, including a call for regular seminars.

There was no levity where Virginia Reimer of the Steelworkers was concerned. Taking the microphone in the midst of 500 delegates — most of them men — she said:

"There has been a serious lack of interest during this report."

She told the men the day would come when they would have to accept the women as equals, adding:

"Too many of you thought this was going to be a tea and cookies session."

Pact Reached

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Abbotsford school district and its teachers arrived at a 1972 salary settlement Tuesday involving an increase of 7.3 per cent. Twenty-six districts now have settled, leaving 51 to face arbitration.

Same But Not the Same

Mr. and Mrs. Saul Field have reason for showing engravings in their Toronto home. However, they collaborate only occasionally. Husband and wife make it plain they're separate individuals, not a team.

Scoutmaster Charged In Child-Selling Bid

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A Scoutmaster and a companion, charged with trying to sell an Oklahoma City woman's two small children for $7,000 and a used car, were held without bail Wednesday in county jail.

The men, identified as William O'Hara, 37, also known as Milford Bennett, and Robert Westenhaver, 22, were arrested after allegedly trying to make the deal with a police informer.

Mrs. Cox reported that O'Hara and Westenhaver had planned a trip to Tampa, Fla., and she told them to "take the children for a little change of scenery."

Investigator W. E. Beacham said. "The little boy had some cigarette burns on him and the little girl had some bruises."

In Oklahoma City, Mike Worley of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said O'Hara had been with the 22-member troop for about two months and was chosen Scoutmaster a month ago.

Tenth Planet Possible, Still 'Only a Notion'

CAMBRIDGE, England (UPI) — A 10th planet may be orbiting the sun out beond the planet Pluto, a Cambridge University astronomer said Wednesday.

Dr. David Dewhirst, chief observer at Cambridge University observatory, said irregularities in the orbit of Neptune, eighth planet from the sun, indicated the possible presence of another body.

"But I must emphasize that at present this is only a notion, the result of theoretical studies by a group of scientists here at Cambridge and by a colleague in the United States," Dewhirst said.

"Admittedly, it is an interesting idea — but at the moment it is one full of doubt as well," he said. "It is by no means a certainty."

Grant Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday rejected a request by the Unemployed Citizens Welfare Improvement Council for $30,000 to provide Christmas gifts and extra allowances for persons on welfare.

Speaker on Hansard

'No Cause For Alarm' In Deletions

B.C. Legislature Speaker William Murray told the Colonist Wednesday there was "no cause for alarm" in deletions from the provincial Hansard, published last week, recording the 1971 session of the Legislature.

Murray said speakers are talking into a live microphone which is picked up clearly on tape and lends itself to correct transcription.

But, he said, persons interrupting the speaker are not on a live microphone, and their comments are not always sufficiently audible to record intelligibly on the tape for transcription, in which case the passage is simply marked "interruption."

This probably was the case in a reported debate between himself, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett and Premier Bennett, he said, although he had not checked the tape on the interplay of words, which was reported Wednesday as a deletion from Hansard.

This is the second year the provincial government has published a Hansard report from tapes.

Murray said he remembered in general the debate, which took place March 23 during second reading of a bill, but reiterated that the missing portion was an interruption, not on a live microphone, and therefore was probably left out for that reason.

Murray said he had some problems getting the Hansard report out this year due to inexperience in Canadian government reports on the part of Norah McNiven, who did some editing of the report.

"This is nothing against her professionally," he said, "she just lacked experience in this field. Next year we will try to get someone with background in Hansard reporting.

Murray said Miss McNiven had left the job in June, making it necessary for one girl in his office to complete the final typing draft for the printer, acounting for the lateness of some extent of the publication, seven months after the session.

Miss McNiven, who has an address in Victoria, was listed as having been a public relations director at Atlanta University, and to have done some diting at Princeton University Press, Charles Merrill Publishers and Judson Press.

Miss McNiven was not available for comment Wednesday night.

'Hell's Gates' Barred

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Backed by the Salvation Army band playing Oh, Why Not Tonight, a local minister has succeeded, at least temporarily, in slamming shut "the gates of hell" in Athens' red light district.

Leading the fight is 34-year-old Rev. Gordon McAttee, a graduate of Fundamentalist Bob Jones University, who now preaches at the Bible Mission church and manages the Bible bookstore in this college town.

Accompanied by the band, McAttee and several other ministers, launched their drive last Friday night before the much heralded game between two southern football powers, previously unbeaten University of Georgia and Auburn University.

The traffic along Elm Street Saturday night, McAttee recalled, was "bumper to bumper," but most of the cars sped off after seeing the preachers, newsmen and hearing the blare of the band.

"Her house is the way to hell," McAttee told the young men as they arrived in their cars. He said many were dissuaded from entering and thanked the ministers for their concern.

"They would say they were glad we stopped them and thanked us for reminding them of the true Christian way," he said.

By Tuesday night the three houses appeared to have shut down, McAttee said. The lights were out, and parking lots in the rear were empty.

Cable Threat Cited

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, says cable television is threatening the aim of Canadian broadcasting — a voice to link the country from coast to coast.

Speaking Tuesday to a meeting of the Canadian Advertising and Sales Association, he said:

"In a large part of our country, where the population piles up like iron filings along the magnetic United States border, you may soon have at least 3¼ million Canadians receiving unlimited American signals and this would challenge our entire system."

He said cable television also means more competition for community television stations which depend on the size of their audience for advertising revenue.

Parley Fruit: Winter Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial finance ministers may draw up plans to combat future winter unemployment, says an official communique issued after the three-day closed economic conference of premiers ended Wednesday.

It said the premiers agreed meetings of their finance ministers "might usefully examine in the coming months" winter employment programs and special employment programs for youth.

The committee would evaluate federal and provincial programs and "prepare criteria, guidelines and contingency plans that might be applied in the design of winter employment programs in the future."

There would be a similar joint examination of youth employment progragrams.

Most of the nine-page communique was a brief review of topics discussed at the conference, with no direct references to any particular province's views. A typical comment was the one on the discussion of planned federal tax changes:

"The federal and provincial governments expressed their views on the above matters and related aspects. A diversity of views exists."

The communique also expressed support for greater consultation between the federal government and the provinces.

Several unresolved issues were left to the finance minister and health ministers to work out at future meetings: a proposed federal formula to keep down increases in shared-cost health programs; the relationship of federal subsidies for poor provinces to federal regional development programs; and long-term federal assistance to post-secondary education.

Imbalance in the federal system must be resolved before discussions on urban affairs will bear fruit, Premier William Davis of Ontario told the conference.

"Unless we address ourselves to resolving the central questions of the distribution of powers and the disparities between revenues and responsibilities, then I believe that whatever arrangements we make to deal with such pressing questions as urban growth will only be short-run, stop-gap measures."

His brief advocated closer consultation with municipalities. He said the federal government has the lion's share of revenues while the provinces and municipalities have most of the responsibilities.

Federal and provincial leaders expressed optimism that they can work out the machinery for joint federal-provincial-municipal consultation.

Prime Minister Trudeau, launching discussion at the final session of the conference, said he believes that "some measure of agreement and general support has been reached on the principle of this form of consultation and that significant progress has been made towards establishing new mechanisms to bring it about within a continuing format."

He called consultation between the three levels of government a pressing issue.

"No one level of government can alone deal with the causes and consequences of urbanization. The policies and activities of all levels of government have an impact on the urban environment."

Allowance Deal Near?

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Wednesday that Ottawa and Quebec officials are "very, very close" to agreement on distribution of federal family allowances.

He told reporters an agreement is about ready for submission to the federal and Quebec cabinets for approval.

Bourassa went further than Health Minister John Munro, who said there was only agreement so far between Ottawa and Quebec on the definition of some aspects of the problem.

Quebec's failure to win control of social programs led to failure of the constitutional conference in Victoria last June.

Asked whether an agreement on family allowances would lead to another constitutional conference, Bourassa grinned and said, "We'll see."

Judge Tells Lawyer: 'Keep Quiet'

MONTREAL (CP) — The preliminary hearing of Vincent Meloche, 27, charged with the shotgun slayings of three Du Pont of Canada Ltd. executives, opened Wednesday over the objections of defence lawyer Robert Lemieux.

Sessions Court Judge Maurice Rousseau listened to Lemieux's arguments, then told him to "sit down and keep quiet" and stop using delaying tactics.

The lawyer had asked for a postponement because lawyer Pierre Cloutier, who was to handle the preliminary hearing, was sick. Lemieux said he could not act for Meloche because he was working on another case.

Near Miss In Berlin

BERLIN (UPI) — Major-Gen. William Cobb, Berlin's American commandant, in his second protest in less than a week on a border shooting, warned Wednesday that Eastern guards firing at refugees could cause a major tragedy.

Cobb said he protested strongly a "wanton" shooting in which a bullet entered an American-sector bedroom and struck a wall one foot above a sleeping couple.

Eastern border guards at 5:30 a.m. had fired 35 shots from a watchtower at a refugee trying to flee across the wall.

New Price Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. price commission gave American Motors Corp. permission Wednesday for a 2.5 per cent price increase on its 1972 models, and studied similar requests by Ford Motor Co. and the Chrysler Corp.

It also turned down the first request for an exemption under Phase 2 economic controls, a bid by the United Illuminating Co. of New Haven, Conn., for retroactive price increases to cover the higher costs of low-sulphur fuel oil required by a state anti-pollution law.

Pinup Girl to Celebrity

Little Bit of England Leaves Life's Stage

By CHRISTOPHER OGDEN

LONDON (UPI) — Dame Gladys Cooper, who rose from a First World War pinup girl to a grand old lady of the British stage in a theatrical career spanning 65 years, died in her sleep early Wednesday, her family said. She was 82.

Dame Gladys was stricken with pneumonia 10 weeks ago after starring in a West End production of The Chalk Garden. A vigorous woman, she was recovering at her home at Henley-on-Thames and preparing to go with the Enid Bagnold show to Toronto later this year.

Hers was the most popular pinup picture of the First World War and British Tommies carried it next to their hearts while slogging through the mud of Flanders. Her star never dimmed from those days until last April when she starred in The Chalk Garden in London.

Dame Gladys . . . in 1968 role

To millions, her porcelain beauty became the standard beside which all English womanhood was judged.

Somerset Maugham met Gladys Cooper when she was a chorus girl at the Gaiety Theatre in 1910. "She's the loveliest thing I've ever seen in my life," the author said.

Later she was actress-manageress at her own theatre and at 75, when many actors and actresses enjoy their retirement, Dame Gladys went to the United States to star in a television series The Rogues with Charles Boyer, David Niven and Gig Young.

The daughter of a journalist, Dame Gladys made her debut on her 16th birthday in Colchester, England, where she played Bluebell in Bluebell in Fairyland.

Her London debut followed in a few months with The Belle of Mayfair. Stage door johnnies flocked to her and squired her to the most elegant champagne suppers in London.

She signed a three-year contract with the Gaiety and had her first major role as Eva in The Girls of Gottenberg.

She married Capt. H. J. Buckminster in 1908, but that marriage and a later one to Sir Neville Pearson were dissolved.

Before the first war, she played in everything from The Importance of Being Earnest to Peter Pan.

Her clear and sometimes-cold voice made her a hit as Lady Macbeth in 1935. Shortly after, she went to the United States where she married her third and last husband, actor Philip Merivale, who died in 1946.

TV Watchdog Condemns Nude Casanova

LONDON (UPI)—A prime time romp across the nation's television screens by a naked Casanova brought mixed reviews Wednesday from critics and a complaint from the head of a viewers' watchdog group that it was lewd.

Within moments of the start of episode one, millions of viewers saw a bare-breasted woman, the great lover leaping naked into bed, and one of his mistresses in the throes of sexual excitement.

Only a few individuals bothered to telephone the British Broadcasting Corp. Tuesday night to voice objection to the program, the first in a series of six on the 18th century Italian philanderer.

"We have had very few complaints," said a BBC spokesman, "but I think most people appreciated the artistic merit of the play."

On the negative side was James Thomas of the Daily Express: "Casanova was not traditionally a slow starter," the reviewer said, "but last night we saw proof of the exception . . . it is not one of those series which can be at once heralded a winner.

"Like some of Casanova's potential mistresses, we must wait and see."

One of those who did not approve was Mrs. Mary Whitehouse, the 61-year-old head of a television clean-up campaign.

Shell Warning

TOKYO (UPI) — The Maritime Society Agency of Japan Tuesday warned all Japanese fishing boats to stay away from the eastern coast of Kamchatka Peninsula in the northern Pacific Nov. 17-27.

Ann practises move

Sidney Dancer Coming Home

Dancer Ann Britten, a former Sidney resident, will make her professional debut here Dec. 7 when she performs with the Contemporary Dancers of Winnipeg at the McPherson Playhouse.

Miss Britten, whose parents live at 2545 Beaufort, attended an audition when the company's director Rachel Browne was here in May and joined the company in August.

"We didn't think she stood a chance," said her mother, Mrs. M. H. Britten, "but we were really happy when she found she had been selected."

The 19-year-old dancer was born in England but spent most of her life in Venezuela where her father was a civil engineer.

Miss Britten began dancing in Venezuela and later studied with Rae Burns in Sidney and with Wynne Shaw in Victoria where she was auditioned for the Winnipeg company.

At the Rae Burns Studio, the young dancer was an assistant teacher and also staged and choreographed shows for children. She also studied at the Banff School of Fine Arts and performed in a number of ballet workshops.

The Contemporary Dancers of Winnipeg are the only fully professional modern dance company in the country.

The group was founded by Miss Browne in 1964 who wanted to experiment with some choreographic ideas she had developed. After two small public performances she couldn't cope with the demand for shows.

In the early days of the company, Miss Browne was not only the company's choreographer and director, she was also the principal dancer.

She had originally come to Canada from New York to join the Royal Winnipeg Ballet as a soloist. She danced with that company for five seasons before branching out on her own.

At the end of six seasons the contemporary group had established an annual schedule of touring 60 centres giving 130 performances seen by an estimated 100,000 patrons.

Upstart Redstart Captured So He May Warble Again

TORONTO (CP) — A five-inch warbler known as a redstart which normally winters in Nicaragua proved itself an upstart by trying to survive in nearby Pickering Township in November.

The black, red, and white bird has been captured and turned over to a Toronto artist who is an expert in the cage care of wild birds.

Barry MacKay, an apartment-dweller, is trying to save the life of the redstart, which flew north just about the time its natural food of insects was depleted by the cold.

"It could never have lived in the wild. I'm still not sure we can save it in a cage," MacKay said Tuesday.

He is feeding the bird through an eyedropper a special formula devised for insectivorous birds in captivity, consisting in part of baby beef heart, potato, honey and vitamins. Tuesday night the bird still refused to feed itself.

A Pickering Township farmer had noticed the bird, a five-inch long warbler, and when it flew into a shed, he closed the door and called naturalists.

McKay said he could tell the redstart had not escaped from someone's aviary because its feet and plumage showed none of the signs that cage life leaves.

Its main summer range is Central America with some nesting north in the mountains of Arizona, southern Texas and New Mexico. It normally winters in Nicaragua.

International records show one sighting in Massachusetts in 1947.

Two Hunters Die in B.C.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Two hunters have died in separate accidents in the British Columbia interior.

Police said Arthur Smith of North Kamloops was shot and killed Tuesday by his 30-year-old son, who mistook him for a moose while hunting in the Barriere area, 20 miles north of here.

At Lytton, 60 miles southwest, searchers Tuesday recovered the body of Merle McAdam of Vancouver, reported missing on a hunting trip Sunday. McAdam, 27, apparently died of exposure.

Comic Would Let Army Feed Poor

FT. CARSON, Colo. (UPI) — Comedian Dick Gregory, 189 pounds lighter as a result of his six-month fast to protest the Indochina war, told Ft. Carson soldiers Tuesday he believed the army could have a useful purpose in life.

"It should go around the world feeding poor people and cleaning up after tornadoes," he said.

The comedian, who weighs only 99 pounds as a result of his fast, told officers there was only one way they could make sure their own men wouldn't attack them.

"You won't have to worry about fragging (grenade attacks on officers) when you get respect, instead of fear, for leadership," he said.

Gregory also criticized law enforcement agencies for being corrupt and said he was only five when he could identify the bookies, hustlers, pushers, pimps and prostitutes in his ghetto of Chicago.

"But for some strange reason the cops didn't (know them)," he said. "Because they are all being paid off."

"Every major police department in every large American city is doing the same thing," Gregory added. "This is something we live 24 hours a day in the black ghetto

Mariner Outlook Brighter

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Mariner 9 took another look at Mars' frosty south polar cap Wednesday because little else showed through the dusty haze still cloaking the planet. There are signs of cleaning, however.

Study of the bright white frozen carbon dioxide capping the South Pole is one of Mariner's prime objectives because it will tell man more about the way seasonal changes affect the planet, and about the Martian environment.

It now is summer in Mars' southern hemisphere and the polar cap is shrinking. The dry ice is evaporating and leaving behind white blotches that are showing up in Mariner's polar pictures.

The carbon dioxide snow also lines crater ridges and one such frost-edged depression appeared dimly in one of Mariner's shots.

Mars' North Pole is also capped with dry ice but it will not come within Mariner 9's photographic view until later in its mission.

Scientists say the dust storm that has veiled almost all the Martian surface since Mariner reached the planet last week is showing some signs of tapering off. Scientists hope the skies will be clear enough in two weeks to show surface detail.

Kissinger—Man of Hour

By RALPH HARRIS

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A drastic shakeup in the globe-circling U.S. intelligence network has put more power in the hands of White House adviser Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger, already perhaps the most influential administration official except for President Nixon himself, has the president's ear on all foreign policy and security problems.

Now, the 48-year-old former professor has been given the key job of providing guidance and direction to Central Intelligence Agency Director Richard Helms. Helms, in turn, has been given new authority to co-ordinate the military and civilian branches of the intelligence apparatus, which have sometimes been rivals in the past.

Kissinger now is in an unchallengable position as head of a new National Security Council committee to oversee the secret information which he uses to recommend policy decisions to the president.

Reorganizing of the intelligence services was announced by the White House Nov. 5 after a study of the CIA and the military intelligence agencies — and the battles between them over interpreting information.

The U.S. intelligence apparatus is unofficially reported to employ 200,000 people, costing $5 billion a year.

A main reason for the sweeping changes ordered by the White House now apparently is President Nixon's unhappiness over the military intelligence planning that went into an abortive raid on a prison camp in northern Vietnam in November of last year.

The camp was believed to hold American prisoners. Helicopter-borne teams of assault troops swooped on the Son Tay camp near Hanoi after months of painstaking planning and intelligence-gathering, only to find there were no prisoners there to be rescued.

Housing Coming

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council decided Tuesday to sell 8.37 acres of land in Champlain Heights to Embassy Estates Ltd. for the construction of low income housing. The selling price will be $457,090 and 144 town houses will be constructed and sold for an average price of $15,900 each.

Radio Astronomers Roam Space

Life Forms Carbon Copies?

By JOSEPH MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Radio astronomers are finding more and more complex molecules in the vast reaches of space between the stars.

Thus far nearly 25 chemicals ranging in the intricacy of their atomic structure from hydrogen to formaldehyde have been identified.

Scientists believe such molecules were the raw materials from which life was created on Earth.

Dr. Arno Penzias of the Bell Telephone laboratories told a recent meeting of the National Academy of Sciences that carbon monoxide accounted for 90 per cent of the molecules in a region of interstellar space which he examined.

Carbon is the dominant element in plant and animal life on Earth. Is space stocked with materials from which life could evolve on Earth-like planets of other solar systems?

More or less in jest, Panzias remarked that carbon "seems to play a disproportionately large role (in interstellar space), even as it does in the things we have for lunch."

Assuming the building blocks of living tissue abound in space, and assuming that life has come into existence elsewhere in the universe, would living creatures on far-away other worlds resemble us and the plants and animals which coexist with us on Earth?

Dr. Joseph Kraut who also addressed the academy, has a strong hunch that they would.

Kraut, a chemistry professor at the university of California at San Diego, is an authority on enzymes.

Enzymes are the numerous chemical control agents which nature has created to turn on, accelerate and regulate the myriad functions performed by the cells of plants and animals.

Studies of two specific enzymes provide, Kraut said, "the first concrete example that I know of that nature has twice come up with the same solution to a specific problem in molecular engineering."

This suggests that, "given a particular function to perform, nature will devise the same molecular machinery — presumably the most efficient machinery — to perform that function."

Although many scientists believe life must have evolved elsewhere in the depths of space, not all feel it necessarily would look like life on Earth.

Kraut conceded that his notion that living things everywhere resemble those on this planet is "wild speculation." But, on the basis of his experience with enzymes, he said:

"We can suppose that nature does these things the same way because there is only one way to do them efficiently . . . we can then hypothesize that there is only one way in which living things can be assembled, here or elsewhere in the universe."

Aminos Without Water

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Two Columbia University scientists have created amino acids — the basic building blocks of life — in a laboratory without water and using only substances known to exist in space.

Their findings were announced Wednesday by the university and also reported in a British scientific journal, Nature.

The scientists are Swedish-born Goesta Wollin and David Ericson of Columbia's Lamont-Doherty geological observatory.

"The absence of water in our experiments strongly suggests that compounds which play an import role in the origin of life may form in interstellar space and that such compounds as amino acids may form on the moon," they said.

Wollin and Ericson mixed three gases — ammonia, methanol and formic acid — which have all been detected in interstellar space. They took every precaution against inadvertently introducing water into their experiments.

The mixture of three gases —as gases, Wollin stressed— produced a colorless liquid which was then exposed to ultraviolet light from a sun lamp. Such ultraviolet radiation exists constantly in space.

After 25 days, amino acids formed, including aspartic acid, glutamic acid, proline, glycine, alanine and valine. All of these are found in living cells.

Although amino acids were first created in the laboratory in the early 1950s, water has always been used in such experiments until now.

Mrs. Jorgensen in kitchen display

By JUDY JENKINS
Family Pages Editor

Redecorating can be a pain in the arches, especially if your dream scheme is a little hazy.

By the time you've chased from one end of town to another trying to find a pink whozis to blend with a scarlet whatnot, you may end up deciding to slap on a coat of brown paint and forget the whole thing.

You may find that salesmen keep bugging you to buy something after you paw through displays for awhile, and you can't find the right combination in one place.

If it's a color scheme, you're trying to devise or a grubby little bathroom you want to be presentable, a display centre in Victoria is ready to help you browse but not buy.

The MDI (Mechanical Display Institute) Plumbing and Heating Planning Centre at 614 Johnson opened nearly a year ago, sponsored by the plumbing and mechanical contractors in British Columbia.

It's filed with bathroom and kitchen fixtures and supplies as well as color charts, tile samples and vinyl samples, and the looking won't cost you a cent.

"Anyone is free to come in and pick out color schemes or fixture styles," said Karin Jorgensen, interior design consultant at the centre — and if you want some expert help, that's her job.

Most of the people who use the centre are doing remodelling jobs, she said. They come in to find out what's available — whether it's a sculptured marble wash basin or kitchen built-ins.

Many people look over the display, decide what they want and go back to their contractors with firmer ideas.

"If they come in and want to do remodelling, we can take care of all the planning and details," Mrs. Jorgensen said. The centre can even find a contractor for the homeowner, and if the owner wants his own contractor, who is a member of the sponsoring Mechanical Contractors Association, the centre will provide detailed designs.

Another option is for the homeowner to choose the centre's certified modernization plan for kitchens or bathrooms. After discussion about aims, Mrs. Jorgensen will visit the home and develop a complete design. When the design is approved, it will then be submitted to three contractors for competitive bids.

Mrs. Jorgensen said she would in effect oversee the actual construction, and the homeowner's satisfaction is guaranteed.

Oh, yes — if shopping without buying anything really frustrates you, there is a tiny corner of the centre, the Bath Bazaar, which is devoted to sale of luxury bath accessories.

Tests Identify Learning Style

Line-Walking Builds Style 'Map'

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — You're told to walk along a straight line. You encounter a chair on the line. Now what do you do?

You can walk around it, kick it, lift it out of the way, crawl under it, climb over it, sit on it, carry it with you or stop trying to walk the straight line.

The straight-line-with-chair test, believe it or not, is part of an unusual pre-admission testing procedure at Oakland Community College in Detroit.

The test also includes cheese tasting and listening to different types of music.

The unusual tests aim to identify the student's learning style and approach to problem solving.

The intent is not only to measure such standard items as reading and mathematical ability, but also to evaluate decision-making and such abstract ideas as "the sixth sense" (proprioceptivity), staged behavior (histrionics), physical co-ordination (kinesthetics) and knowledge of oneself (synnoetics).

Observations and test results are processed on the school's computer, and correlated into a "cognitive style map" showing the student's characteristics and aptitudes. The map is used by the student and his teachers to choose from a variety of study methods in courses ranging from social science to chemistry.

All of this is by way of making the learning process more individual. Once the map is made the student may check in at a "prescription centre" instead of taking the courses planned for every student. At the prescription centre the student may tailor his educational program to the style most appropriate for him.

Some 50 per cent of the faculty at the 15,000 student school is involved in this new approach toward better understanding an individual's cognitive and responsive styles.

Among the different activities available are videotape replays of lectures, special youth - tutoring - youth seminars, totally independent study, programmed textbooks, rap sessions with faculty members and traditional lecture-discussion meetings.

The cognitive style approach used at the school applies to many areas beyond education, according to Dr. Joseph Hill, president of the school. He believes that such a program may lead to better rehabilitation methods for drug users and youth-offenders.

"Cognitive style" education has been a success at Oakland Community College, if ordinary tests mean anything. Student performance, such tests show, has improved from a national average of 50 per cent in course study to 87 per cent.

For the first time this year the cognitive style approach to education has been adopted by many elementary and high schools in the Detroit metropolitan area. It is being put into action in other school systems nationwide.

Hill explains that each individual has a unique "cognitive style" that describes how he makes judgments, reasons and reaches decisions.

"For example," he said, "a categorical thinker is someone who wants everything to be orderly and in its own place. He might have a hard time at a modern art exhibit but might make a very good accountant."

Hill believes that knowledge of a person's "cognitive style" also may be helpful in counseling him about interpersonal relationships, such as the family, marriage and business. This approach has been tried on a limited basis outside the classroom in the Ingham County correctional system in the Lansing, Mich., area.

On a limited scale, cognitive-style mapping also is being used at McGill University in Toronto and at Dawson College in Montreal.

Curtsy Lack Reproved

'Behavior Uncouth'

LONDON (UPI) — A British lord, the Earl of Lindsay, has written to Martha Mitchell, wife of the U.S. attorney general, rebuking her for "uncouth behavior" in refusing to curtsy to Queen Elizabeth at a Buckingham Palace garden party.

Mrs. Mitchell, writing in the Ladies Home Journal, said she did not curtsy, a traditional mark of respect, because she did not feel an American should bow to a foreign monarch.

"On this principle," Lord Lindsay wrote in his letter to Mrs. Mitchell published Tuesday in the Daily Telegraph, "I take it that it is your considered opinion I should remain seated during the playing of the Star Spangled Banner."

"It has never entered my head not to stand" when the U.S. national anthem was played, Lindsay said.

Knowing "how to behave in polite society (was) something which has obviously been omitted from your education," he wrote.

"You have merited a stern rebuke for your uncouth behavior, but do not despair — I am confident that if you keep your eyes open or apply your mind to the problem you will learn in time and, who knows, one of these days you may find yourself a credit to your husband," Lindsay said.

Lindsay suggested to Mrs. Mitchell "that you refrain from visiting Buckingham Palace or any similar establishments in the future, but remain at home in Keokuk, Iowa, or Kalamazoo, Mich., or wherever it was you originated. In such places it is unlikely you will be able to perpetrate ony social solecism."

Lindsay said he would be "happy to bow" to President Nixon if he were invited to the White House.

Mrs. Mitchell is from Pine Bluff, Ark.

BULLET GULPED

BALTIMORE (Reuter) — A woman shot in the face at her home was back on her job as a barmaid Tuesday after swallowing the bullet, police said.

Doctors at the hospital where Jacqueline Chavis, 21, was treated earlier in the day told police that a .22-calibre cartridge which entered her face between her nose and right eye was located at the back of her throat.

But they later told police that Mrs. Chavis had reported "swallowing something." X-rays were taken and a bullet was discovered in her stomach.

Mrs. Chavis was treated for a small wound and a rip in a tear duet.

Police said she was released with the bullet still in her stomach. They sought a warrant for the arrest of a man who allegedly shot Mrs. Chavis.

Poison Warning

Novelty carvings of monkeys sold in some Victoria stores may contain beans of deadly poison, department of consumer and corporate affairs has warned. Monkey is carved from cocconut, and in some models similar to one held by clerk, baby monkey's eyes are shiny beans, scarlet with jet black tip. These jequirity beans could kill child if he ate half of one. Beans are easily removed and should be disposed of, according to Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford.

The large amount of money raised at the pre-Christmas bazaars around town never ceases to amaze me. And there are many of them being held —all the churches, hospitals and other organizations raise money in this way at this time of year.

One of the biggest money raising events, the Royal Jubilee Hospital bazaar isn't taking place this year and that is news in itself.

In place of the bazaar the Royal Jubilee Junior Auxiliary is putting on a coffee party and fashion show by Scuby Furs Dec. 1 from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the lounge at the nurses' residence.

The furs will be shown from 11:30 a.m. to noon and again from 12:30 to 1 p.m. A beautiful mink stole will go to one lucky ticket holder and a handmade crochet afghan is also to be raffled.

□

At St. Joseph's Hospital bazaar, a total of $6,828.63 was raised. The used clothing stall raised $759.

Home baking is always popular and $511 was made at this stall, attic treasurers accounted for $331.17, baby fancy work, $254, Lucky Seven, $255.90 and Christmas decorations, $177.20.

The chicken lunch raised $479.

□

This afternoon at 2, Quita Walters will open the Quita Nichol Auxiliary to Goodwill bazaar at Goodwill Enterprises Rehabilitation Centre, corner of Bay and Wilson. The auxiliary was named after Mrs. Walters' mother, the late Mrs. W. C. (Quita) Nichol.

A feature of this bazaar will be the sale of 125 dressed dolls. These dolls were dressed and donated by Arbutus, Reynolds, Lansdowne and Colquitz junior high school students.

Tea will be served.

□

Another group working for their fifth annual bazaar is the Martlett Chapter IODE. This bazaar will be held at the Maltwood Museum, 4509 West Saanich, Nov. 25 starting at 11 a.m.

Once again gourmet foods will be featured. Foods for festive entertaining made from cherished old family recipes as well as food made from recipes as new as tomorrow will be for sale.

New this year will be the grandmothers boutique where adoring grannies may buy gifts for the youngest generation. Mrs. Mary Garvie and her group of potters have donated handmade pottery at the Etcetera stall where Christmas decorations and gifts will be sold.

Dr. G. Corwin and the university choir will provide entertainment and refreshments will be served. Mrs. E. T. Lovett is convener.

□

The Shape of Things to Come will be the theme at the Victoria Presbyterial United Church Women workshop on Nov. 25.

Elaine Peacock, field secretary, is coming from Vancouver for the event which will start at 10:30 a.m. in the Fellowship Hall of First United Church. Tea and coffee wil be provided to those attending, who are asked to bring their own lunch.

Women Picked For Mission

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — The Church of Jesus Christ of Later-day Saints Mormon has renewed its missionary efforts in Sarnia by assigning two new women missionaires from the U.S. to the area.

Will Girdle Be Killing You?

By MARILYN GOLDSTEIN

From the folks who brought you the midi comes the news that the girdle is back in style.

" . . . It's back to yesterday's type of foundations — girdles that trim tummy and waist and bras that hold the bosom and sometimes pad it," Women's Wear Daily reported in a recent front-page story.

So bra and girdle manufacturers are smiling. Foundation department managers in stores are smiling. But will women be smiling, when they are once again snagged by zippers, stabbed by bones, squashed by satin panels, impaled on stays and pinched by cinchers? Will they take it as demurely as that model on the TV commercial who smiles through it all while she primly announces, "My girdle is killing me?"

Never, said a group of women shoppers surveyed in Saks Fifth Avenue on Long Island.

Possibly it is the flush of success over having beaten the midi that is encouraging women to once against resist Seventh Avenue. Possibly it is memories of the physical discomfort of yesterday's undergarments that is stirring the new revolt, but even middle-aged and older women seem determined to battle for their bulges.

"I just don't like us to be pushed into cages," Mrs. Blossom Landsman, a middle-aged woman, size 14, said as she surveyed the foundation merchandise. "Give me comfort," said Mrs. Franklin Newton, who is 62.

"I don't think I'll ever go into it (any kind of girdle)," said Mrs. Tina Cafaro, a 33-year-old size 9. "I don't think they're dictating to us as men's Wear Daily told us the midi was here, too. And look what happened to that."

Behind the projected return of the foundation is the return of fitted dresses, with waistlines, bias cuts that hug the hips and darts that need to be filled with bosom, foundation garment manufacturers said. Dorothy Pollack, of Formfit Rogers, doesn't think the new call for freedom or for comfort will have a thing to do with the return of the girdle.

"They may not care if they jiggle under their new clothes, but they're going to care if they can't get the zipper up the dress," she said.

Harriett Ford of Vassarett said, "Women's Wear Daily took a great deal of license saying that ("It's back to yesterday's type of foundation") but what they mean is that women are turning to control."

Is Your Breath What It Used To Be?

Bad breath has a number of causes. Age is a factor—so are dentures, caps, bridgework, gum trouble and so on. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control "aging breath" problems. You see, Steri/sol is the only mouthwash with Hexetidine—the powerful germ killer that deprives mouth bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live.

When you are worried about "aging breath", rinse with Steri/sol. Steri/sol is specially designed to combat these particular breath problems. The germ killing action of Hexetidine starts immediately, and within 15 minutes up to 95% of bad breath bacteria are eliminated. And because the Hexetidine in Steri/sol clings to mouth and gum tissues, the bactericidal action keeps on working up to 10 hours to help you feel really sure about your breath.

Put Steri/sol to work on bad breath right away. It does cost more than you might usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

And Now, Mud Bed— 'It's Like Floating'

POMONA, Calif. (UPI) — You've heard of the water bed, now meet the mud bed, which its developer describes as "incredibly comfortable."

"It's softer than a feather bed. It's like floating. You can relax completely," said Dr. James Reswick, an engineer and director of the Rehabilitation Engineering Centre at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital here.

The bed consists of a square wooden frame with a sealed bottom. It is filled with special mud and covered by a vinyl sheet sealed to the sides of the frame. The mud is electrically heated to 85 degrees.

Reswick said that tests of a protopype bed at rancho Los Amigos has had great success in solving the problems of bed sores.

The key ingredient is a special, thick fluid similar to oil well drilling.

Hubert Sanchez, district superintendent for the firm which supplied the mud fluid, said it was twice as dense as water.

"It's a special concoction we use in ships as a ballast fluid," Sanchez said. "It has a water base and contains barium sulfate and betonite."

Reswick, who worked out his design with help from Dr. Vernon Nickl, co-director of the hospital centre, and head nurse Barbara Madden, said the mud bed was very different from the water bed.

"The home water bed is made of sealed fabric filled with water. You are supported more by the material than the water.

"In the mud bed you are totally supported by the hydrostatic pressure of the fluid," Reswick said.

I have a friend who, every Friday, carries on a clandestine luncheon with her own husband.

She drives her car into town and he drives his. They meet at some obscure little restaurant, get a table in the rear where they hold hands and stare lovingly into one another's eyes. In the parking lot, after their tryst, they kiss good bye and she whispers, "I'll try to make it next Friday."

When I told my husband about it, he laughed until he snorted. "How bored can a woman get?" he snickered.

"So bored she would meet Walter Brennan without his teeth . . . at McDonald's . . . and go dutch."

"Who do you know that desperate?"

"Me," I said. "Every woman has to romanticize her marriage," I explained. "It's woman's nature to crave the excitement and the stimulation that lured her to marriage in the first place. Why don't we do it?"

"I'd feel like a fool," he said. Then, sensing my disappointment he added, "Okay. I'll meet you at Ernie's Eats next Friday."

I dressed carefully on Friday feeling a bit foolish, yet with a certain sense of wickedness. I parked the car and ran to him. He looked at me intently. "What are you thinking?" I asked softly.

"I was wondering if you brought your American Express card. If you didn't we'll have to go to the Beer and Bloat Palace across from the office. They cash checks on Friday."

"You devil, you," I countered. "You mustn't say things like that until we're alone."

"What happened to the tender?" he said. "Another parking meter run out in front of you?"

"We do have to stop meeting like this," I said. "Every week I say I am not coming, but when Friday comes I am helpless."

"Are your corns bothering you again? You don't look too good under the eyes. Like maybe you ought to get the load off your feet."

"It's eye make-up, precious. Just for you. Notice anything else different about me?"

"You sewed the button on your coat."

"The perfume, you madcap. I won't wear it again unless you promised to behave yourself."

"What'll you have?" he asked, opening the menu. "Unless you're too in love to eat."

"Are you crazy?" I asked, grabbing the menu. "Make it two hamburgers, an order of onion rings, a double malt and banana cream pie."

I can't figure out how sex symbols stay so thin.

Peruvian Girl, 9, Bears Baby Boy

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A nine-year-old girl gave birth to a healthy boy weighing seven pounds at a private Lima maternity clinic last June, a physician said recently.

Dr. Felix Lopez said the birth took place June 11 and was completely normal although special precautions were taken because of the mother's age.

He refused to identify her, saying only that she was the daughter of a poor family living in El Porvenir, a Lima slum community.

The case first was reported by a Lima newspaper after court officials began attempts to locate the father. Officials refused to identify the father, currently sought by police.

Lopez told reporters that the girl, in an advanced state of pregnancy, was brought to his office last June and immediately taken to the private clinic. The birth occurred normally and the mother and child were released from the clinic four days later.

Mother and child have been returned to the home of the mother's parents and are being cared for by a social agency, the physician said.

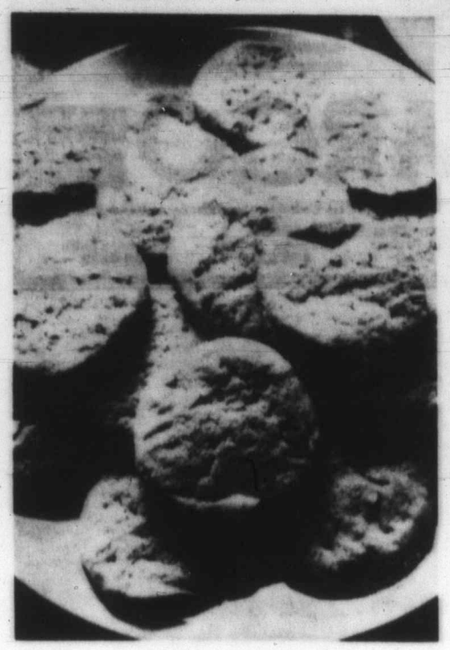
All Roads Lead to Malnutrition

'Boredom, Pressure, Nerves'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Milkshakes and babysitting have produced a generation of overweight, undernourished teenagers, according to nutritionists.



Snacks—empty calories

Teenagers feel pressures never dealt with by their parents, according to Mrs. Leanne Cupp, national vice-president of the Future Homemakers of America. There are "tests, tests, and more tests, endless application forms for everything, and high school courses more involved than ever before," she said.

The importance of getting into college and the difficulty of doing so is enough to take away the appetite, she said, and the bored babysitter tires of television.

"But the refrigerator is full," she said. "Boredom, pressure, nerves — all roads lead to the refrigerator and malnutrition."

Mrs. Cupp said it has been estimated that teenagers eat at least one-fourth of their daily food in snacks.

"There is gum and candy all morning, cookies and potato chips in the afternoon, a sandwichs, cake and soda at home after school, and soda and pretzels with homework or TV after dinner — all empty calories."

A proposal by Dr. Ivy Celender, director of General Mills' nutritional service department, has suggested way-out menus to catch the fancy of bored teenagers:

Breakfast could be hamburger on a bun, chocolate milk, and an orange, perhaps eaten on the run. Tacos made with hamburger, lettuce, tomato, and cheese could be the main lunch dish, along with a banana milk shake and an apple. For dinner there could be cheese pizza, carrot sticks, butterscotch pudding, and cola, and ready-to-eat cereal with milk would make a late evening snack.

James McFarland, board chairman and chief executive officer of General Mills, acknowledged the meals sounded "wild."

"But the diet is sound, offers more than the recommended four servings of fruit and vegetables, four of milk, two of meat, and four of cereal products," he said.

Dr. Ruth Leverton, top scientific adviser in the Agricultural Research Service, warned against faddist practices like the Zen macrobiotic diets which, she said, are becoming increasingly popular with the young.

The diets are reported to be fashioned after that of Zen Buddhist monks, a claim not substantiated by fact, she added.

The first level of the Zen diet includes cereals, vegetables, fruit, seafoods, and desserts, and need not be inadequate, Dr. Leverton said. But the goal eventually is to omit everything from the diet except cereals, chiefly brown rice, and to avoid fluid intake as much as possible.

She quoted faddists as saying the all-cereal, low-fluid Zen diet is a simple cure for cancer, mental disease, and heart trouble.

Dr. Leverton quoted a warning by the Council on Foods and Nutrition that Zen macrobiotic diets have been followed by cases of scurvey, anemia, and various forms of malnutrition, as well as loss of kidney function because of the restriction on liquids.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: There is this bleached blonde who talked my husband into taking up square dancing. In the close proximity of this fun pastime, she applied a little body English and they went from square dancing to love-making. I could see the sparks flying but I figured it was a harmless flirtation and would soon wear off. So we went on square dancing and I kept fooling myself because he insisted it was wonderful exercise.

Three weeks ago I caught them — in the station wagon, of all places. It just about killed me. My husband and I had a long talk. He says he doesn't know how it all happened. He doesn't want a divorce or a separation. We've been married nearly 30 years and have never had any trouble. The blonde is also married and is not looking to break up her home either. The problem is that my husband wants to continue square dancing and I say nothing doing. What is your advice? — Billings.

Dear Bill: In view of the circumstances, your husband should be willing to hang up his dancing slippers and get his exercise some other way. As for you — I suggest that you forget the whole thing and try a little body English of your own.

□

Dear Ann Landers: Our children were brought up with the idea that everyone who lives in the house does his share of work. It was expected and there was no arguing. Our three oldest who are grown and married seem to have the idea that they can come home to Ma and Pa's and enjoy a free, leisurely vacation.

They arrive with their families and plop themselves on us "for a rest." The grocery bills are double and so is the work. They sleep all morning and I have to run after their kids, bathe and feed them. We still have two children at home and they resent this extra burden. Frankly, so do I. Please tell a very tired mother who is pushing 55 what to do about her problem. — No Martyr in Lancaster.

Dear No M.: Apparently the job of training your children is not finished. Even married children can learn — and I suggest you teach them. The lesson is as follows: The Old Homestead is not a hotel. When you return for a vacation you pitch in — just as you did when you lived here. And you take care of your own kids — like you do at home. End of lesson.

TORONTO (CP) — Hania Federowicz is editing a magazine which she hopes will be "a source of Polishness in a Canadian community."

The magazine Echo began in 1970 as a quarterly but became monthly after its September issue following receipt of an $11,000 opportunities for youth grant during the summer. The grant was given to help develop a new format and give it a boost into the future.

The magazine contains articles of a literary nature, short stories and poetry in both Polish and English.

Marek Brodzki, managing editor and one of the founders, sees it as a means of keeping the Polish community alive.

A third-year University of Toronto student, Brodzki said there are 350,000 people in Canada of Polish origin and brought up like himself in the Polish cultural tradition "which we want to share with other Canadians."

The staff is varied. Miss Federowicz, who speaks four languages fluently, is a student of linguistics.

Yvonne Buczkowski, who works in the Echo's circulation department, is studying for her doctorate at York University. She also teaches humanities at Otkinson College and has had articles in the magazine. Barbara Fedorowicz, who helps with circulation, works in a bank.

Priorities

For folks who must go to the office or shop every day, gardening at this time of the year is necessarily restricted to weekends, and the hours available are not always enough to take care of all the odd little jobs that accumulate through the week. The main thing is to allot top priority to the most pressing chores, particularly those that involve the life or death of living plants.

The work schedule should include such tasks as staking and tying and small trees or shrubs which may be coming adrift in the wind, and firming the soil around any recently planted specimens. Another job of high priority is the taking and rooting of cuttings.

I mention this now, not because this is the best time of the year for taking slips — actually August is better for most of the shrubby and woody subjects — but because so much valuable material comes available during the fall and winter pruning and thinning operations. If one of your neighbours is doing a clean-up job on his flowering shrubs, his berry bushes, grape vines or hedge, this is a good time to scrounge some of his prunings to start some plants for your own garden.

Even though this is not the most favorable time of the year, the following subjects can be propagated fairly readily from cuttings taken now, and with reasonable care, 50 to 70 per cent of your slips should root successfully: Buddleia, Deutzia, Forsythia, Kerria japonica, Philadelphus or Mock Orange, all the Ribes family which includes the ornamental flowering currants as well as the berry bushes; the shrubby Spiraeas and Tamarix.

The best shoots for this purpose are from new branches, produced and ripened this last summer. These can usually be distinguished from the older branches or shoots by the absence of side shoots and by the paler, smoother bark. Each long shoot will make several cuttings, dividing them into sections 7 to 10 inches long.

★ ★ ★

It is important, when preparing your slips, to mark them in some way so you will be able to tell top from bottom, for slips won't root if you plant them upside down. One common way is to trim the top end with a slanting cut, about halfway between two leaf joints, and the bottom cut straight across, about half an inch below a joint.

Pruning shears or secateurs are seldom sharp enough for trimming slips, for any crushing or bruising of the wood interferes with rooting. Use a very sharp knife, or better still, an old razor blade, and you'd better do all your trimming on a wood block, for it is the easiest thing in the world to slice into the ball of your thumb, particularly when cutting through a hollow-stemmed shoot.

I wouldn't dream of taking a cutting of any kind without using a hormone rooting powder, for roots are produced so much more surely and speedily with this chemical aid. Rootone, Stim-Root and Seradix are all good products. Simply moisten the base of the slip, dip it in the hormone powder, then tap it gently to dislodge any excess dust, for too much is worse than not enough.

If you have no greenhouse or cold frame, the slips may be rooted in an outdoor bed of sandy soil with a half-inch surfacing of pure sand or chicken grit. Space your slips four inches apart and four inches deep, give one good watering to settle the soil, but thereafter try to maintain the cutting bed just a little on the dry side. It is a good idea to dig a little gutter around such a bed to carry off excess rain.

Whiter Than White

WASHINGTON — Thanks to the government, American housewives are completely confused about the use of phosphate detergents.

First, they were warned that if they used these detergents they would pollute the waters of the land.

Then, after the women decided they would give up phosphates and use other kinds of cleansers, they were told by the U.S. surgeon general to go back to using phosphate detergents.

★ ★ ★

Because of this confusion we have decided on a question-and-answer format to clear up this matter once and for all:

Q: Why does the government tell you one thing about phosphate detergents, and then a few months later tell you the opposite?

A: Because one department of the government never knows what the other department of the government is doing.

The environmental protection agency, which worries about clean water, is against phosphate detergents because they cause algae to grow in the water.

The surgeon general is for phosphate detergents because they are safer for children to eat than caustic detergents without phosphates in them.

Q: Where do the soap companies stand?

A: They can go either way, at least in their advertising campaigns. When the first publicity about phosphate detergents made the headlines, all the soap companies announced they had new non-phosphate products that would save America.

Now that phosphates have the surgeon general's approval, the soap companies are back to their old products and have decided their new detergents won't save the environment after all.

★ ★ ★

Q: What is the soap companies' solution to eutrophication, the process which clogs the water with algae?

A: The soap companies' solution is for each community to build new sewage-disposal plants to screen out the phosphates.

Q: Isn't that more complicated than screening out the phosphates before they go into the detergent boxes?

A: Yes, it is, but soap companies don't have to pay for the sewage plants.

★ ★ ★

Q: What is the surgeon general's argument for housewives going back to phosphate detergents?

A: His argument is that 85 per cent of people using phosphate detergents are not contributing to water pollution. Only 15 per cent of the population, mostly around the Great Lakes, are guilty of eutrophication.

Ecology people opposed to phosphates say the surgeon general is all wet. Any time you discharge phosphates into water, they affect the quality of water hundreds of miles away. The lakes of 32 of the 50 states show signs of dying from Phosphate-fed algae.

Q: Who is the housewife to believe?

A: That's a good question. The housewife has to make a choice between clothes that are whiter than white or water that is cleaner than clean.

Q: Are you trying to say we must all choose between what we wear and what we drink?

A: Something like that. Americans have been brought up to believe that clean laundry is next to godliness. But there is now scientific proof that people can live longer drinking clean water than they can wearing clean shirts.

★ ★ ★

Q: But won't a housewife be pilloried in her neighborhood if her husband's shirts aren't sparkling white?

A: That is the biggest myth of all. Nobody wears white shirts any more.

Q: If a housewife didn't want to use phosphate detergents and she was afraid of using non-phosphate detergents, could she use laundry soap?

A: What's laundry soap?

Taste, Norway Style

MARILYN BECK

Jim Arness is a hero in Norway. His Gunsmoke show is rated number one in that country, the Norwegians feeling particularly close to Jim because his father was born there. This is the report I get from my aide, Penny Anderson, who just returned to Hollywood from overseas assignment. She also noted, "The visits made by Amanda Blake and Ken Curtis to Norway in recent years haven't hurt Gunsmoke's appeal. They talk about the cast as if they're the most important stars in the world." And, Tony Curtis and Roger Moore should be happy to learn, next best in popularity on the Norwegian tube is The Persuaders. Big-screen wise, they're standing in line over there to see!—are you ready for this? — Tarzan! Three versions of Tarzan are currently being featured in Oslo moviehouses: Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan starring in one; Denny Miller and Joanna Barnes in another. And, admitted Penny, she's forgotten the heroes of the third.

★ ★ ★

In Sweden the word is dissatisfaction with Ingmar Bergman's latest film, The Touch. It's Bergman's first English language film and, claimed his countrymen to whom Penny spoke, there's the disappointing feeling that it's not as touching or important as his previous works.

★ ★ ★

In Penny's final report from London, she noted that celebrities certainly have a way of laying it on the line there. On the subject of cinema nudity, Roger Moore made the point that he walks around naked in his own home. "My children see me naked all the time." But he wouldn't like them to go to the theatre and, "see me naked with a lot of other people." Roger, a romantic, has decided, "No one can be glamorous standing with drooping busts and stretch marks round their bellies. But put them in a Dior gown, then you have something else."

Joan Collins has even stronger feeling on the subject these days. I guess she's forgotten all the nude romping she and her ex-hubby Anthony Newley did in the Universal disaster, Hieronymous Merkin. Her most current word from Blighty: "The body and love-making are very personal things. They're certainly not a spectator sport." Joan managed to convince the producers of her two latest films, Quest and Revenge, that the intimate love scenes for these epics could be done just as effectively without those bare-it-all scenes she currently objects to.

★ ★ ★

The reason for all the current preoccupation with that nude subject in Blighty no doubt has to do with the showing of Oh! Calcutta, a play the Daily Express described as "The Dirtiest Show in Town." If you're ready for one last observation on the subject of exposure, here's the word from author Irving Wallace. He's got a thing against women burning their bras, worried that those gals might be doing injury to themselves. "They have an erroneous confidence in the buoyancy of the female breast," Irving said, very concerned that, "In five years they'll be sorry. Newton always wins in the end."

Joy of Children

DR. STUART ROSENBERG

For one toothless grin, we would exchange much of life's treasure. The greatest gift we can achieve — the gift of a life — can often soften the toughest of us.

The day was long and the toll on our nerves and energy great and demanding. One smile, one hug, one feeble embrace — these helped us turn our backs on life's difficulties and to sing a new song.

The crustiest worker or businessman can be easily melted by the smile of a little child at the end of a long day.

★ ★ ★

The world, with its furies and its passions, rages on. New years and new threats may come — but the fundamental things never change.

As long as there is a child waiting for our understanding and our guidance, our love and our direction, no matter what the blackheadlines may read, there is hope — there is even room for laughter.

For all of the beauties and mysteries of life, none can overtake or replace the irresistable, and irreplaceable — the little child, beckoning us to the future.

This is why parental failure looms as one of the largest of all the human tragedies which blights our lives.

Consider the excitement which animates a father when his child is first born. Ponder the thrill of creating with God, a new generation, springing from our loins and our wombs. You see it in the eyes of every young parent; even more in the eyes of young grandparents.

Yet, in this age, when newness and novelty create barely a ripple, a child still possesses the magical capacity to enliven our hearts and to move us to great excitement and exaltation.

As time grows, we grow older — we move away from the joys we had when our children still exalted our imagination. Before long, our children no longer thrill us.

★ ★ ★

On the contrary: they may worry us; sometimes they even frighten us. Soon the spark is gone. The radiance which illuminated our hearts dulls and dims. Instead of walking, talking and living with our children, we are walking away from them.

Yet, a man may reach the heights of his profession, achieve public acclamation, and enjoy a multitude of compensations in a lifetime. But deep in his inners, he who has failed with his own children knows that his truest challenge has gone unanswered.

He may crack the whip with others, and get them to do his bidding only because of power which is external — in the office, the store or the factory. But there, in his internal life within the family environment, no bossy ordering of children will do.

Not what a man looks like to the people whom he seeks to impress, not what he looks like when he is all dressed up going elsewhere. But what he looks like at home, without make-up, when nobody's there but the young lives who come from him, there, deep in the interior of life is where the tell-tale story of a man's success is truly told.

We do not succeed in everything we undertake with our children. But when there is something that sings within us, our songs are sung long after we are gone by children who remember.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Wednesday's answer — Among actors Crosby, Gable, Grant, Guinness, Holden, Milland and Olivier, the only one who never costarred with Grace Kelly was Olivier. And her brother Jack gained fame through sculling, which proves we give you all the trivia.

Today's question is the same for Marilyn Monroe. Choose from the following the only one who never costarred with Monroe: Joseph Cotten, Tony Curtis, Tom Ewell, Clark Gable, Rock Hudson, Robert Mitchum and Laurence Olivier. If she ever had a brother, I never heard of him. Answer Friday.

"You MUST remember him. He was married to Mary Pick."

Winning Contract

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

It is against my policy (says Bee) to have Howard for an opponent if I can possibly avoid it. This deal, which came up while I was kibitzing at the Cavendish recently, shows why.

Howard was the declarer. A heart opening would have deflated the contract, but West, having a sure trump trick, decided not unreasonably that there was no point in looking for ruffs.

Instead, he began with the king of clubs, which Howard won with the ace, discarding a heart from hand.

The contract still appeared to depend on a 2-2 trump break, but with the possibility of a worse break in mind, Howard made the farsighted play of ruffing a club at trick two.

He then led trump to dummy's king and took another club ruff before laying down the ace of diamonds and exposing the sure trump loser.

Declarer crossed to dummy's ace of spades and ruffed yet another club. Three more rounds of spades followed, dummy ruffing the last one.

Declarer was now able to ruff a club for the eleventh trick while West had to follow helplessly. At the finish East held the A-K of hearts and West the master trump, but these tricks fell together.

All of which goes to show that when declarer's only problem is to make all his trumps, it can be a good idea to commence ruffing at the earliest possible moment. If declarer had not ruffed a club at trick two, he could not have made the contract.

All of which goes to show that when declarer's only problem is to make all his trumps, it can be a good idea to commence ruffing at the earliest possible moment. If declarer had not ruffed a club at trick two, he could not have made the contract.

15 PETS AND SUPPLIES

B and M PET SHOP
Temporarily located. 10366 Patricia Place, Sidney. 656-4441. We would like to express our thanks to all our friends and associates who visited us well on our opening last Friday. However, due to our opening being in a residential area, complaints have been going to Sidney Town Hall. We are very sorry about this, especially since we have been asked to cease retailing until we can locate a store. We are hoping to move to Beacon Avenue before Christmas and would appreciate our customers and friends placing their orders with us now to avoid disappointment at Christmas time. Our sincere thanks. Bert and Mickey Wilson

Zoning Bylaw Passed

By MARY TAYLOR
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — The Alberni-Clayoquet Regional District has become the first regional district in B.C. to draw up a comprehensive zoning bylaw.

The district's revised zoning bylaw culminated more than four years of discussion which drew about 140 representations from groups and individuals in the area.

In its final form, the bylaw will fill about 70 pages.

The regional district board gave second reading to the bylaw recently and will likely give it third reading at the next board meeting Nov. 24. The bylaw will then go to the provincial cabinet for approval, returning to the board for a fourth and final reading.

Board chairman Les McKinnon said Wednesday the board has been greatly impressed with the care and effort that has gone into each of the many changes that planner William Bleakley has incorporated into the revised zoning bylaw.

Many of the changes were the direct result of suggestions or adaptations of suggestions made by groups of individuals who appeared at hearings held throughout the regional district.

The main change, Bleakley said, was brought about by legislation last spring permitting the regional district to declare development areas and to enter into land use contracts with developers.

Seven development areas have already been set up to go into effect when the bylaw passes. Three are in the Bamfield area, three near the new Pacific Rim National Park and one in the Alberni Valley.

Bleakley explained that under the new regulations developers must make suitable bonding arrangements, while land use and servicing would also have to be negotiated with the board. In addition, land use in a development area requires a public hearing.

The planner said the board has also loosened and eased the regulations by creating new one-acre residential areas to answer the needs of people who want to have "one horse and a little land."

However, granting of permits for one-acre home sites would be decided on an individual basis and would depend on the quality of the land for septic tanks and other factors, he said.

At all times regulations of the health department would take precedence over zoning.

Changes have also been made in the square footage of housing with 560 square feet now the minimum for one-bedroom dwellings. This would accommodate a large number of mobile homes as well, Bleakley said.

Forest reserves or E3 zones have been renamed undeveloped land reserves. Farming and related activities will be allowed provided this is done by extension of adjoining farm land. Creation of a new farm would require rezoning.

However, Bleakley said that the zoning bylaw is only a basis from which to go forward to future planning and "not a set of hard and fast rules on a forever basis."

The board has also directed the planner to come up with a formula to cover erection of additional dwellings for bona-fide relatives or employees on relatively large farm areas.

McKinnon said the board had been unable to fulfill all the suggestions made by more than 140 representations at various times and places.

Roof Collapses Studied

Advent of Winter Snowfalls Brings Warning of Danger

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Many cottages, homes and buildings will collapse in the next few months, hopefully in the absence of the owners and other occupants.

The chief villain will be snow, abetted by inadequate structural design, poor maintenance or lack of emergency roof clearing.

The coming winter snows has prompted the National Research Council's building research division to issue a warning Wednesday about high snow loads.

Last winter's record-breaking snowfall in the St. Lawrence Valley and eastern Ontario — 14½ feet in the national capital — brought the customary series of collapses.

Possibility

"As the probability of heavy snowfall is the same for all winters, there is a possibility that it will occur again this winter," the announcement said.

Sports arenas, especially those with wide roof expanses held up by concrete block walls and long trusses, are in particular danger.

This is the kind of building that produced the greatest arena tragedy of recent times. Seven boys and an adult were killed and 13 boys injured in the collapse of the hockey rink roof at Listowel, Ont., Feb. 28, 1959.

Tragedy

Only a few hours separated residents of Lakefield, Ont., near Peterborough, from a similar tragedy Feb. 14 this year. The town's hockey arena collapsed between 4 and 6 a.m. without loss of life or injury.

Hours later it would have been occupied by young hockey teams as in Listowel.

W. R. Schriever, who heads the building structures section of NRC, said in an interview that another danger area is flat or shallow-sloped roofs beside and at a lower level than large-roofed industrial buildings.

Level Raised

Snow tends to blow off flat roofs onto the lower structures, building up five to 10 times the ground-level snow depth.

Schriever, an engineer, said last winter was particularly bad for industrial roof collapses, especially in Montreal where there are a substantial number of flat-roofed industrial buildings.

Where a homeowner will keep an eye on the snow depth on his own roof and shovel it off when it gets too deep, industrial buildings get less attention of this kind.

In part this is due to substantial costs of keeping a large roof clear of snow blown off adjoining buildings during heavy snowfalls.

Budget Fault

Some arena problems have been linked to construction of buildings on limited budgets without benefit of proper engineering.

Plans have been passed from community to community and have been used to build a roof of larger span without redesign of support members.

Periodic inspection for cracking, movement of walls or supporting beams and deterioration of materials should be undertaken.

"Snow removal by shovelling at times of heavy snowfall should only be relied upon as an emergency measure," NRC warned.

"More effective permanent solutions should always be sought."

Mail Reports Save Visits

EDMONTON (CP) — About 15,000 families receiving income maintenance in Alberta are being allowed to report their financial standing by mail.

The department of health and social development says the administrative change will eliminate the need to have its 600 social workers visit homes and fill out forms.

Guilty Plea Wrong

Argument over whether a man who had pleaded guilty could change his plea to not guilty proved a waste of time Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court when it was discovered a plea of not guilty was mandatory in his case.

The Victoria resident, Burke Wesley Mullins, 44, of 64 San Jose, first appeared Oct. 28, when he pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of making a threatening phone call Oct. 26 to U.S. vice-consul John Horan at the U.S. consulate-general's office in Vancouver.

He was remanded to Nov. 10 for a pre-sentence report and sentence but when he appeared then he said he hadn't realized the severity of the sentence — a maximum of 10 years in prison — and didn't remember making the phone call.

Mullins asked to change his plea and Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre put the case over for a week so Mullins could get a lawyer.

Wednesday, lawyer Douglas Christie appeared for Mullins and engaged in a lengthy discussion with the judge about the proposed change. As the judge approved the change, prosecutor J. W. Anderson rose to point out the law said such charges must be heard by a Supreme Court judge and a preliminary hearing was mandatory in Provincial Court.

"The guilty plea was wrong in the first place," St. Jorre said. "The plea was a nullity."

He chose Dec. 17 as the date for the hearing and set bail for Mullins at $2,000.

Four Killed

Pakistan Combs Rebels In Dacca

DACCA (UPI)—West Pakistani troops seeking Bengali terrorists on a house-to-house search through the East Pakistani capital Wednesday killed four armed rebels and arrested 138 others, military authorities said.

They said the four terrorists were killed when they tried to fight their way to freedom. Twenty weapons were seized, the authorities said.

The operation began with a surprise curfew imposed at 5 a.m. to keep the three million citizens indoors. The curfew was lifted 15½ hours later.

Maj.-Gen. Rahim Khan, deputy martial law administrator for East Pakistan, said the search was for armed Bengali terrorists who have been harrassing authorities with almost daily bombings and shootings.

"The time has come to find these people," he told newsmen. "They do not have the capability for a major action, but their incidents have been worrying the public."

The search affected only metropolitan Dacca and not its widespread suburbs. The army divided the city into five zones for the search, with each zone commanded by a brigadier.

Military spokesman Col. Rashid Qureshi told newsmen the searches were being conducted "very, very politely, with officers on the scene along with local neighborhood leaders."

The military set up 30 special interrogation teams to screen suspects.

Brig. Gen. Mohammad Aslam, commander of one of the zones, told UPI, "All-India Radio has been saying that with the bombs and shooting we lost control of this city, so we decided just to see who had control."

During the curfew hours, Dacca was a virtual ghost-town, with only occasional military vehicles on the roads and sentries posted at all intersections.

Gen. Khan said the army had been planning the raid since last week's terrorist bomb blast which injured 22 kindergarten children, and another bomb explosion which killed five and wounded 55 in a crowded market place.

'Launch People's War'

BAGHDAD (UPI) — President Ahmed Hassan Al-Bakr of Iraq called Wednesday for a "people's war of liberation" against Israel.

In only his fourth news conference since he seized power in a military coup in 1968, Bakr said Israel was racialist and fascist and cannot stop moving toward aggression."

He said Arab nations "cannot remain with arms folded toward this aggression and should launch a popular armed struggle."

"The war consequently is there," Bakr said, "but its forms may vary. We call for a people's war of liberation."

Iraq has rejected all attempts to reach a political solution in the Middle East, saying the Palestinian guerrillas should spearhead the fight against Israel.

For Provinces, Later

Federal Tax Bill 'Will Cost Votes'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial governments may ultimately lose votes because of federal tax reform legislation, provincial revenue department officials said Wednesday.

Representatives of the Ontario and Saskatchewan governments, in papers presented to the annual conference of the Canadian Tax Foundation, said it may be difficult for Provincial Governments to convince taxpayers a few years from now that higher taxes were necessary then to compensate for revenue lost under a federal bill which takes effect Jan. 1, 1972.

Roy Lloyd of Regina, director of the Budget Bureau for Saskatchewan, said several provinces will have to raise taxes to maintain revenue after expiration of a federal guarantee that they will not lose income because of the new legislation.

"Five years from now we can anticipate a jump in provincial rates of tax," he said in a paper read by Craig Francis, a Saskatchewan Budget Bureau analyst.

"Somehow I feel that it may be a little difficult for provincial governments to convince the public that these increases are the result of the implementation of a new tax system in 1972."

H. Ian Macdonald, deputy treasurer and deputy economics minister of Ontario, said the new tax law "does not measure up to the task" of serving the interests of Canadian federation.

In a paper read by William Stow, an Ontario government economist, Macdonald said the bill "only succeeds . . . in enshrining the boundaries of the federal fiscal world."

He said the legislation appears to be "a process whereby the federal government has staked out its own fiscal claim and now proposes that the provinces should do the same.

" . . . But surely it is not a situation calculated to be conducive to harmonious federal-provincial fiscal relations."

The papers were presented at a panel discussion during the final day of the foundation's 23rd annual conference.

Higher Prices Likely

VANCOUVER (CP) — Increases in prices of houses and consumer goods, rents and interest rates as a result of new federal tax legislation were predicted Wednesday by speakers at the annual meeting of the Canadian Tax Foundation.

The projections were made by members of a panel session on the effect on real estate and securities markets of the federal bill scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1.

The bill would implement a tax on profits from sale of investments but principal residences on Canadian taxpayers would be exempt.

"This will likely increase the demand for owner-occupied housing and in the initial years inflate house prices," said Frank Clayton of Toronto, an economist with Canadian Real Estate Research Corp. Ltd.

The bill would sharply reduce the return an individual could expect by owning rental property and there would be a decline — but not as dramatic as for individuals — in the profit to corporations from rental property.

"The net effect of these forces . . . will be gradual upward pressure on rents," Clayton said.

Big Oil Spill Could Cost Canada $100 Million

● Scenario for disaster. Page 29.

OTTAWA (CP) — A major oil spill on a proposed Alaska-to-Washington state tanker route could cost Canada about $100 million, says a document made public Wednesday.

The estimate is contained in an appendix to a diplomatic note presented Aug. 18 to the U.S. state department by the Canadian embassy in Washington, opposing the tanker route.

In the formal aide-memoire itself, Canada rejected a U.S. suggestion that the two countries consider establishing a joint contingency plan to deal with potential oil spills on the West Coast.

However, the government offered to exchange technical information regarding the tanker situation on the Atlantic coast.

The diplomatic note, together with a series of appendices and annexes, was tabled in the Commons Wednesday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in response to an earlier request by David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich).

Anderson has been carrying on a personal crusade against the tanker route, which would move Alaska North Slope oil to a refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., on Puget Sound.

The U.S. government has not yet given permission for the trans-Alaska pipeline that would have to be built to move the oil from wellhead to tidewater at Valdez on the south coast of Alaska.

The aide-memoire says little is known about dealing with an oil spill in enclosed waters, such as Juan de Fuca Strait which tankers would use.

However, an attempt to formulate "some values" for a supertanker mishap in the system indicated that a major spill "could result in an economic loss to Canada in the order of $100 million."

This did not include the effect on wildlife — which would be placed in a "precarious position' by a major spill — or esthetic considerations.

Penny-Per-Fish Levy To Fight Alaska Pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alaska's fishermen are taxing themselves a penny per fish to pay for a court battle against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline, which they contend would destroy their livelihood.

"It's just that oil and fish are not compatible," Knute Johnson told a news conference here Tuesday.

"We are not against a pipeline as such," said Johson, chairman of the Cordova District Fisheries Union. "We are not against progress and employment and money for Alaska . . ."

The CDFU is asking that the interior department be prohibited from granting a permit for the pipeline to run 800 miles from the North Slope to a tanker terminal at Valdez.

The 450-member union charges that heavy ship traffic through the Valdez Arm would inevitably lead to oil spills which would destroy crabs, salmon and other fish. Johnson said the area often is enshrouded by fog and is subject to winds of 80-100 miles per hour.

"Historically, the oil industry has run over anybody that got in its way," Johnson said. "Now they're trying to run over our living.

"We're fishermen — that's all we've got."

Bennett

Federal Vote In June Forecast

● Canadians less worried about foreign help. Page 6.

● Parley may mean jobs in future winters. Page 41.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett flew into Vancouver Wednesday night from the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa, predicting a federal election in June and the defeat of the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau.

He said his four days in Ottawa were enough to convince him there will be a federal election in June, and he added: "The present government will be defeated and the Conservatives will hold the majority of seats." He said the Social Credit in Quebec might even hold the balance of power.

But in British Columbia, he said, voters shouldn't count on going to the polls until 1973.

Referring to the federal-provincial conference, he said he had planted the seeds of a negative income tax and free trade with the U.S. and is content to cultivate them until they are ready for harvest.

He said the two proposals were new to other premiers. "All of them are interested in a negative income tax," he said, "but the idea is still new to them. They can't see the advantages of giving us some revenues."

Bennett said he was sick at heart to see farms being abandoned on the Prairies and towns being boarded up. He said, "It is not healthy to be driving these people and others from the Maritimes into the slums of the cities when this negative tax would keep them in their homes."

Vancouver Makes First Move

Savage Will Urge Bus Deal Talks

● Hydro electricians hike totals 15.8 per cent. Page 11

Victoria Ald. Clyde Savage said Wednesday he will urge the Capital Regional Board to take immediate steps towards taking over B.C. Hydro's bus operations in Victoria.

Savage, one of four Victoria representatives on the board, was commenting on a decision earlier Wednesday by the Greater Victoria Regional Board to start negotiations with the provincial government regarding the possible regionalization of the Vancouver bus system.

"It's an excellent idea, and an excellent time to work towards the same end in Victoria," Savage said in an interview.

"I will bring up the matter at next week's regional board meeting," he said.

Savage has taken an interest in Victoria's transportation problems for a number of years.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, told the Colonist he didn't think the board would be able to take "immediate steps" to assume operation of the Victoria area bus system.

"Public transportation and traffic in general are items which the regional board will consider to an increasing extent in the next few years," he said.

"What happens in Vancouver will, of course, be of great interest to us on a smaller scale, but I don't think anything similar will be done here immediately," Curtis said.

Air Crunch May Come By Dec. 31

OTTAWA (CP) — A strike of air traffic controllers could tie up the country's airports as early as Dec. 31 if a conciliation board named Wednesday is unable to settle a contract dispute.

A spokesman for the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association, which represents more than 1,600 key airport workers, said Wednesday the board is scheduled to begin hearings Dec. 10.

It will have two weeks to make a decision, unless an extension is agreed to.

Montreal Rooming House Bomb

Blast Victim Crawls Stairs

MONTREAL (CP) — An explosion, apparently caused by a bomb which was detonated prematurely, damaged a four-storey rooming house and seriously injured a man in his 20s Wednesday.

Police said the man was apparently trying to assemble some dynamite and detonators when the blast occurred on east-end St. Denis Street near De Maisonneuve boulevard.

The injured man was found by a janitor on the second-floor landing of the building moments after the blast and was taken to hospital where he was listed in critical condition.

The police anti-terrorist squad and firemen were rushed to the scene.

When the janitor found the victim, the man had crawled down two flights of stairs and his overalls were still smouldering. The janitor said the man had rented the room Oct. 20.

Doctors at St. Luc Hospital said the 27-year-old man was badly burned and they were operating to restore natural breathing and save his eyesight.

Mother of Four Needs That Little Extra Help

By KATHRYN HAZEL

The "500" Fund

Like the day when 14-year-old Kathy left her room a mess, after Darlene had asked her "at least 50 times to clean it up," and 12-year-old Joe came home with a bad report card and then the seven-year-old twins got into a big fight in the middle of the crowded living room.

Darlene is emotionally unstable, and it takes all her strength just to manage a normal routine of life — let alone handle four children in a cramped, run-down apartment in one of the uglier areas of downtown Victoria.

Her husband Jack tries to help her as best he can, and with his easy-going, warm personality, he can give her some of the security she needs.

But now he's worried. He hasn't been able to find work since the last construction project he was on finished a few months ago.

He hopes to get something under the make-work projects planned by the city under the federal incentives program, but that won't be until January.

For Darlene's sake, he needs it now, so she can have the kind of Christmas she really needs—free from worry, a time of happiness and relaxation.

Darlene is under trestment, but it's a long, hard struggle. She feels worst when she can't provide for her family and a bleak Christmas with no special dinner or presents would be another terrible setback for her.

A donation to the Colonist 500 Fund can help people such as Darlene and her family have a happy Christmas.

Contributions to the Fund can be sent to or left at the Colonist, 2631 Douglas Street, or dropped off at Avis Rent-a-Car, 800 Douglas.

Six Killed Instantly In Gas Leak

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Six utility workers suffocated, two others were injured and an entire neighborhood was evacuated Wednesday when a subterranean valve ruptured on a methane gas line under repair in northeast Pittsburgh.

Authorities said the six employees of the Equitable Gas Co. died instantly of "acute methane poisoning" when the gas spewed from the broken valve on a pipeline on which they were working beneath a sidewalk. The two injured workers were not seriously hurt.

Thai Coup Ends Experiment In Democracy

BANGKOK (AP) — Thailand's experiment with democracy ended Wednesday when Premier Thanom Kittikachorn dissolved parliament, suspended the constitution and assumed absolute power.

Paratroops moved into Bangkok and tanks encircled the parliament building. Despite martial law and police check points in the streets, the capital appeared calm.

Radio Thailand, between patriotic songs, said Thanom would head a revolutionary council with power to decide all civil and military matters.

The council pledged to continue Thailand's foreign policy, which has been strongly anti-communist and pro-U.S. during the Indochina war.

The council said internal domestic strife and a threatening international situation had made the coup necessary.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman, who lost his job, blamed Thanom's decision on "excessive behavior" of members of parliament.

"I take satisfaction in the development," he said. "The only regret I have is that it could not have taken a more evolutionary form.

"Somehow or another we have not mastered the political forms of Europe and America."

Thanom's power move ended the two-year life of parliament and the three-year life of Thailand's constitution. Both were experimental ways of government in Thailand, which was the absolute monarchy of Siam until 1932.

'Not Enough Time for Study'

Pool Proposal Rejected

DUNCAN — Plans for a local swimming pool met another obstacle Wednesday.

In a press conference at Duncan, chairman of the swimming pool study committee Charles Rowley said that his committee had turned down a proposal from a citizens group headed by Duncan Ald. Martin Lukaitis for the public recreational pool.

Rowley said the committee had turned down the pool proposal because it had not been given a sufficient amount of time to study and evaluate the details.

He said the citizen's committee had presented the plans to the study group Tuesday night, asking for an immediate decision, or, at the latest, a decision within six days.

"There were many details that required more investigation than was possible within the time limit imposed on us. We could not have reached a responsible decision within that time," Rowley said.

He added that the study committee had objected to the choice of Rotary Park as the site for the pool, financing details and the fact that they felt the group headed by Lukaitis had not considered fully the fact that the operating costs would be borne solely by Duncan taxpayers.

"The ball is now in Duncan's court," he explained "The pool study committee is not a decision-making body — it is our job to make recommendations. If the city wants to build a pool, then that is their pigeon and they must take the responsibility."

Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife, commenting on the refusal of the study group to give a decision, said that he felt the group should be given another opportunity to study the proposals.

"I agree with the committee that the time limit imposed on them was not enough. We definitely need a swimming pool and I feel that the proposal was a good one," Quaife said.

Rowley said that the original agreement had been for the pool committee, members of which were appointed by Duncan, North Cowichan, and Op-Rec, to conduct in-depth studies which would include public meetings.

"But such public meetings will not be held until after the Dec. 11 elections," Rowley said. "Otherwise there is a danger of this whole thing becoming a political football."

Op-Rec chairman Pat Moore said the decision of the study committee would not affect Op-Rec.

Moore explained that two conditions necessary for the release of Op-Rec funds were:

- That the decision to approve the pool be made by both the city of Duncan and the municipality of North Cowichan, even if the actual plans were to be carried out by only one of the two;
- That the pool plans meet the terms outlined in the Op-Rec trust funds agreement.

Lantzville Exchange Switches on Sunday

NANAIMO — The new Lantzville electronic switching exchange will go into service Sunday.

About 700 telephone customers now served by the Wellington exchange will be transferred to the new Lantzville exchange and will have new telephone numbers with the prefix "390" which appear in the new telephone directory delivered this week.

Neil Stewart, district customer service manager said the new Lantzville exchange will provide improved service in the northern Wellington and Lantzville areas and will also provide free switching equipment in the Wellington office to take care of growth in the area.

The new building is situated at the corner of Lantzville Road and Jacks Road and the total project cost $856,000.

It is the second conversion to electronic switching on Vancouver Island and the sixth in B.C.

Russian Tour Described

Opinions Shattered

COURTENAY — A tour of Russia has shattered any preconceived ideas about the country, Courtenay druggist Harold Woodland said this week at a Rotary Club meeting.

Woodland himself a 31-year member of the Courtenay Rotary Club, spent three weeks in Russia on a recent trip.

The speaker, in explaining the vastness of the country said that a trip from one coast to the other found his tour group only one-half way across at the end of five days," and it was not a slow train."

Woodland noted fantastic hydro development. Three dams, one believed to be the largest in the world, are built in the perma-frost areas.

As a tourist, he said his group was entitled to a tourist guide, supplied by the government. The guide spoke excellent English and any information asked for was readily given, Woodland said. The group was allowed to take pictures of anything except planes and trains, but the speaker said when the train passed through military towns, no one was allowed to leave the train even the Russians, unless they were from the military.

Moscow has six million inhabitants in winter, eight million in summer, he said. The government determines how long a visitor may stay, usually three days. The city has an economic achievement centre which Woodland described as "like a world's fair all day, every day." It is designed to show both themselves and the world what they do, he said.

A visit to Lenin's tomb he described as a dramatic presentation. "Lenin in years to come," Woodland said, "will probably be to the Russians what Christ is to the Christians."

Leads B.C. in Comprehensive Zoning

Alberni-Clayoquot Region Completes Land Use Bylaw

By MARY TAYLOR
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — The Alberni-Clayoquot Regional District has become the first regional district in B.C. to draw up a comprehensive zoning bylaw.

The district's revised zoning bylaw culminated more than four years of discussion which drew about 140 representations from groups and individuals in the area.

In its final form, the bylaw will fill about 70 pages.

The regional district board gave second reading to the bylaw recently and will likely give it third reading at the next board meeting Nov. 24. The bylaw will then go to the provincial cabinet for approval, returning to the board for a fourth and final reading.

Board chairman Les McKinnon said Wednesday the board has been greatly impressed with the care and effort that has gone into each of the many changes that planner William Bleakley has incorporated into the revised zoning bylaw.

Many of the changes were the direct result of suggestions or adaptations of suggestions made by groups of individuals who appeared at hearings held throughout the regional district.

The main change, Bleakley said, was brought about by legislation last spring permitting the regional district to declare development areas and to enter into land use contracts with developers.

Seven development areas have already been set up to go into effect when the bylaw passes. Three are in the Bamfield area, three near the new Pacific Rim National Park and one in the Alberni Valley.

Bleakley explained that under the new regulations developers must make suitable bonding arrangements, while land use and servicing would also have to be negotiated with the board. In addition, land use in a development area requires a public hearing.

The planner said the board has also loosened and eased the regulations by creating new one-acre residential areas to answer the needs of people who want to have "one horse and a little land."

However, granting of permits for one-acre home sites would be decided on an individual basis and would depend on the quality of the land for septic tanks and other factors, he said.

At all times regulations of the health department would take precedence over zoning.

Changes have also been made in the square footage of housing with 560 square feet now the minimum for one-bedroom dwellings. This would accommodate a large number of mobile homes as well, Bleakley said.

Forest reserves or E3 zones have been renamed 'undeveloped land reserves. Farming and related activities will be allowed provided this is done by extension of adjoining farm land. Creation of a new farm would require rezoning.

However, Bleakley said that the zoning bylaw is only a basis from which to go forward to future planning and "not a set of hard and fast rules on a forever basis."

The board has also directed the planner to come up with a formula to cover erection of additional dwellings for bona-fide relatives or employees on relatively large farm areas.

McKinnon said the board had been unable to fulfill all the suggestions made by more than 140 representations at various times and places.

He said the bylaw would legalize all existing uses and that advisory planning committees will be set up in each area to deal with future problems and to make suggestions to the board.

Duncan Battle Livens For Five Vacancies

December Election

DUNCAN — "I think I can do a better job than some of the people who are on council now," Kenneth Paskin, 41, who will run for an alderman's seat on Duncan city council this December said Wednesday.

Paskin is manager of the Duncan branch of Butler La Farge Ltd., president of the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, and head of the Cowichan Valley Juvenile Soccer Association.

Ken Paskin

He is very critical of several surveys carried out by the city jointly with North Cowichan. Paskin said total cost of all those reports amounts to about $38,000 and "As far as I am aware none of the recommendations from these reports were implemented. In reference to an efficiency report done by the city alone the candidate said, "The (council) had this report for six weeks and as far as I know they have made no special effort to discuss it. It is all part of the inefficiency."

Paskin said he will work for a better liaison between council and the mayor. "I want to work constructively towards a better government." Paskin also advocated the joining of the city's volunteer fire department with the nearby North Cowichan southend volunteer fire brigade.

There will be five vacancies on city council in this December's election, including the mayor's seat.

The two mayoralty candidates are incumbent mayor Jim Quaife and Ald. Martin Lukaitis who submitted his resignation in mid-term. The other three aldermen John Homer, Tom Kilpatrick and Jay Powley will seek re-election. Homer, 61, is credit manager of Duncan Garage. He was elected for a one-year term last year. Now he has set his sights on a two-year term. He said "We are working on plans for a swimming pool and this is one of the things I would like to see brought to a head. There has been planning for a good many years by many people for this pool. Op-Rec (Cowichan Operation Recreation Society) has collected $85,000 by public subscription and I would like the city to proceed now because of the availability of government funds."

Tom Kilpatrick

Homer also hopes to see some improvement of roads on Indian within the city.

Veteran alderman Tom Kilpatrick, 66, on council for the past six years, wants to run for another two-year term to get a proposed three-year road program on its way.

Kilpatrick owns a business in Duncan. "I would like to get council's and the electorate's approval. This definitely will be my last term," he said. Kilpatrick proposed a $376,264 road program to take care of all city streets. He said the money could be repaid at six and a half per cent either in 15 years at $40,100 or in 20 years at $34,200 annually.

Kilpatrick said if the proposed program is not approved "We shall have to look at a substantial mill rate increase."

Also seeking re-election is retired newspaperman Jay Powley, 69, who was elected last year for a one-year term. "Actually I did not want to run again, but there is so much unfinished business," he said. Powley would like to see the development of Rotary Park go ahead before the swimming is built in that area.

"The swimming pool matter should be thoroughly investigated first. Who, for instance, will pay for the pool's maintenance? I think all these questions should be answered first."

As an old hand at reporting on legislative sessions and large cities' councils, Powley is critical of the way Duncan council conducts its business.

He said "city council is very lax in conducting business which leads to these small hassles because council members do not follow the rules of debate."

Powley was legislative reporter in Saskatchewan for three years and during that time covered Regina City Council meetings and he covered the B.C. Legislature for 15 years. For 16 years he reported on Vancouver city council meetings.

Alberni Canal Oil Spill Probed

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Department of transport and harbor officials are investigating an oil spill in the Alberni Canal.

There were conflicting reports about the size of the spill, but harbor master Capt. Don Brooks said Wednesday he didn't think it was more than half a barrel. A detergent chemical was used to neutralize the oil.

U.S. Man Jailed On Drug Charge

DUNCAN — A young U.S. citizen was sentenced here Wednesday to a three-year sentence in the B.C. penitentiary for possession of hashish by Provincial Court Judge Lance Heard.

Frederick Foote Strough, 21, of Glastonbury, Conn. was found not guilty of a second charge, trafficking of hashish.

Tight Money Blamed

Cumberland School Replacement Fails

CUMBERLAND — Premier Bennett will be asked by Cumberland village council to reconsider a decision which prohibits replacement of the old, once condemned Cumberland school.

The decision to write the premier was made at a special meeting of council Wednesday night.

The meeting followed an announcement that a Courtenay school district request for construction of a new school had been turned down for the third successive year.

Mayor William Moncrief reported telephone conversations held earlier in the day with both Dan Campbell MLA for Comox and Education Minister Donald Brothers.

Moncrief said Campbell denied any knowledge of the government action, which was made known to school trustees by letter Tuesday. He said he would continue to act on behalf of Cumberland.

Brothers told the mayor that all school districts in B.C. are facing the same situation and only construction of essential classrooms is being allowed. He said there was a tight money situation and things would not change this year.

The education minister said the construction might be considered in 1973-74 if there were no strikes and the economy improved. Moncrief said the minister told him the school will be replaced.

When asked to attend a proposed public meeting in Cumberland, Brothers told the mayor he didn't think it would serve any useful purpose. Council will ask both Brothers and Campbell to put their telephone remarks in writing.

Moncrief said, "All I hear is the good life . . . I'd like to know where it is." He said the premier talked about the booming economy while Brothers talks tight money.

Concerned parents, meanwhile, are circulating a protest petition which will be presented to the premier in his capacity as finance minister.

The battle for replacement of the old elementary school has been a continuing one for trustees of Courtenay school district. The building was slated to be replaced three years ago and a referendum, to have been placed before the people at that time, was halted when the Socred government instituted a building freeze. Since then repeated efforts by trustees have failed.

The school building was recently inspected by fire, building and health officials and a long list of deficiences compiled.

A building site adjacent to the village park has been donated by the village of Cumberland for construction of a new building. School children would have the use of a multi-purpose park and playground complete with change rooms.

Trustee Ruth McKellar, who represents Cumberland on the school board, said Wednesday, "One can only feel disappointment, frustration and even anger. We will, however, continue to fight for Cumberland. It is the only school in our district which does not meet our standards."

Brothers late Wednesday told the Colonist the Cumberland school decision did not mean the government was planning a general school construction cutback. "We anticipate increased spending this year over 1970," he said. "The Cumberland school is an existing facility which we do not wish to replace at this time."

North Cowichan

Haywood Seeks Council Seat

NORTH COWICHAN — David Haywood, the chairman of the Cowichan school board, has announced his intention to run for the position of North Cowichan alderman.

Haywood is the eighth nominee to announce plans to compete for the one single-year term left vacant by Ald. George Whittaker's resignation, as well as three regular two-year terms.

Whittaker will vie with incumbent North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith for the top civic position.

Incumbents Tom Burge and Margaret Robertson have announced that they will seek re-election. Jim Roome, whose term as alderman has also expired, has said that he will not seek re-election.

Candidates, including Haywood, are Henry Bepple, Ron McKinnon, Peter Idema, and Archie Stevenson.

Haywood, who has been a member of the school board for two and a half years, is employment supervisor at the Crofton Pulp and Paper mill. He has said that he will complete his term as school trustee, although he will not run for chairman.

"Should I be elected and the demands of the two offices become too great, I will, of course, review my continuation as school trustee," he said.

Haywood added that he was especially interested in running for council because of his interest in the areas of social assistance and regional districts.

Crew aboard Coast Guard lifeboat at Tofino relaxes after checking their craft in preparation for Vancouver Island's west coast winter storms. Recreation Lack Hit

COURTENAY — Disgruntled Courtney and district residents have formed a 20-member committee to approach the Comox-Strathcona Regional District board about recreational facilities in Courtenay school district.

The committee was formed at a protest meeting Tuesday attended by 200 residents.

Meeting chairman Alex Slater said the regional board had passed a motion in September to form a committee of representatives from each municipality and area to gather information on recreational needs and hold public meetings and report to the board Nov. 22. Slater said no meetings had been held although it was later learned the committee's first meeting had been held Sunday.

Much of the discussion at the meeting centred on the Sunday gathering, what took place at that meeting and why no members of the regional board attended the protest meeting Tuesday.

Elected to the committee were, Al Decker, Jim Odo, Jim Noble, Clay Grant, Ross Sinclair, Grant Clement, Joe Lalesky, Art Morgan, Joe Gillespie, Herb Bradley, Gord Palmer, Dick Isenor, Alex Slater, Ron Hornby, Bata Ellis, Alec Mitchell, Ron Aitken, Chuck Cronmiller, Bert Buziak, Merv Koski and S. Caswell. Cassie Cessford declined the nomination and her place was filled by Ruth McKellar. Most of the committee members are from Courtenay and Comox.

Big Oil Spill Could Cost Canada $100 Million

● Scenario for disaster. Page 29.

OTTAWA (CP) — A major oil spill on a proposed Alaska-to-Washington state tanker route could cost Canada about $100 million, says a document made public Wednesday.

The estimate is contained in an appendix to a diplomatic note presented Aug. 18 to the U.S. state department by the Canadian embassy in Washington, opposing the tanker route.

In the formal aide-memoire itself, Canada rejected a U.S. suggestion that the two countries consider establishing a joint contingency plan to deal with potential oil spills on the West Coast.

However, the government offered to exchange technical information regarding the tanker situation on the Atlantic coast.

The diplomatic note, together with a series of appendices and annexes, was tabled in the Commons Wednesday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in response to an earlier request by David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich).

Anderson has been carrying on a personal crusade against the tanker route, which would move Alaska North Slope oil to a refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., on Puget Sound.

The U.S. government has not yet given permission for the trans-Alaska pipeline that would have to be built to move the oil from wellhead to tidewater at Valdez on the south coast of Alaska.

The aide-memoire says little is known about dealing with an oil spill in enclosed waters, such as Juan de Fuca Strait, which tankers would use.

However, an attempt to formulate "some values" for a supertanker mishap in the system indicated that a major spill "could result in an economic loss to Canada in the order of $100 million."

This did not include the effect on wildlife — which would be placed in a "precarious position" by a major spill — or esthetic considerations.

Penny-Per-Fish Levy To Fight Alaska Pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alaska's fishermen are taxing themselves a penny per fish to pay for a court battle against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline, which they contend would destroy their livelihood.

"It's just that oil and fish are not compatible," Knute Johnson told a news conference here Tuesday.

"We are not against a pipeline as such," said Johson, chairman of the Cordova District Fisheries Union. "We are not against progress and employment and money for Alaska . . ."

The CDFU is asking that the interior department be prohibited from granting a permit for the pipeline to run 800 miles from the North Slope to a tanker terminal at Valdez.

The 450-member union charges that heavy ship traffic through the Valdez Arm would inevitably lead to oil spills which would destroy crabs, salmon and other fish. Johnson said the area often is enshrouded by fog and is subject to winds of 80-100 miles per hour.

"Historically, the oil industry has run over anybody that got in its way," Johnson said. "Now they're trying to run over our living.

"We're fishermen — that's all we've got."

Bennett

Federal Vote In June Forecast

● Canadians less worried about foreign help. Page 6.

● Parley may mean jobs in future winters, Page 41.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett flew into Vancouver Wednesday night from the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa, predicting a federal election in June and the defeat of the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau.

He said his four days in Ottawa were enough to convince him there will be a federal election in June, and he added: "The present government will be defeated and the Conservatives will hold the majority of seats." He said the Social Credit in Quebec might even hold the balance of power.

But in British Columbia, he said, voters shouldn't count on going to the polls until 1973.

Referring to the federal-provincial conference, he said he had planted the seeds of a negative income tax and free trade with the U.S. and is content to cultivate them until they are ready for harvest.

He said the two proposals were new to other premiers. "All of them are interested in a negative income tax," he said, "but the idea is still new to them. They can't see the advantages of giving us some revenues."

Bennett said he was sick at heart to see farms being abandoned on the Prairies and towns being boarded up. He said, "It is not healthy to be driving these people and others from the Maritimes into the slums of the cities when this negative tax would keep them in their homes."

Savage Will Urge Bus Deal Talks

● Hydro electricians hike totals 15.8 per cent. Page 11

Victoria Ald. Clyde Savage said Wednesday he will urge the Capital Regional Board to take immediate steps towards taking over B.C. Hydro's bus operations in Victoria.

Savage, one of four Victoria representatives on the board, was commenting on a decision earlier Wednesday by the Greater Vancouver Regional Board to start negotiations with the provincial government regarding the possible regionalization of the Vancouver bus system.

"It's an excellent idea, and an excellent time to work towards the same end in Victoria," Savage said in an interview.

"I will bring up the matter at next week's regional board meeting," he said.

Savage has taken an interest in Victoria's transportation problems for a number of years.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, told the Colonist he didn't think the board would be able to take "immediate steps" to assume operation of the Victoria area bus system.

"Public transportation and traffic in general are items which the regional board will consider to an increasing extent in the next few years," he said.

"What happens in Vancouver will, of course, be of great interest to us on a smaller scale, but I don't think anything similar will be done here immediately," Curtis said.

Air Crunch May Come By Dec. 31

OTTAWA (CP) — A strike of air traffic controllers could tie up the country's airports as early as Dec. 31 if a conciliation board named Wednesday is unable to settle a contract dispute.

A spokesman for the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association, which represents more than 1,600 key airport workers, said Wednesday the board is scheduled to begin hearings Dec. 10.

It will have two weeks to make a decision, unless an extension is agreed to.

Montreal Rooming House Bomb

Blast Victim Crawls Stairs

MONTREAL (CP) — An explosion, apparently caused by a bomb which was detonated prematurely, damaged a four-storey rooming house and seriously injured a man in his 20s Wednesday.

Police said the man was apparently trying to assemble some dynamite and detonators when the blast occurred on east-end St. Denis Street near De Maisonneuve boulevard.

The injured man was found by a janitor on the second-floor landing of the building moments after the blast and was taken to hospital where he was listed in critical condition.

The police anti-terrorist squad and firemen were rushed to the scene.

When the janitor found the victim, the man had crawled down two flights of stairs and his overalls were still smouldering. The janitor said the man had rented the room Oct. 20.

Doctors at St. Luc Hospital said the 27-year-old man was badly burned and they were operating to restore natural breathing and save his eye sight.

Thai Coup Ends Experiment In Democracy

BANGKOK (AP) — Thailand's experiment with democracy ended Wednesday when Premier Thanom Kittikachorn dissolved parliament, suspended the constitution and assumed absolute power.

Paratroops moved into Bangkok and tanks encircled the parliament building. Despite martial law and police check points in the streets, the capital appeared calm.

Radio Thailand, between patriotic songs, said Thanom would head a revolutionary council with power to decide all civil and military matters.

The council pledged to continue Thailand's foreign policy, which has been strongly anti-communist and pro-U.S. during the Indochina war.

The council said internal domestic strife and a threatening international situation had made the coup necessary.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman, who lost his job, blamed Thanom's decision on "excessive behavior" of members of parliament.

"I take satisfaction in the development," he said. "The only regret I have is that it could not have taken a more evolutionary form.

"Somehow or another we have not mastered the political forms of Europe and America."

Thanom's power move ended the two-year life of parliament and the three-year life of Thailand's constitution. Both were experimental ways of government in Thailand, which was the absolute monarchy of Siam until 1932.

Mother of Four Needs That Little Extra Help

Like the day when 14-year-old Katity left her room a mess, after Darlene had asked her "at least 50 times to clean it up," and 12-year-old Joe came home with a bad report card and then the seven-year-old twins got into a big fight in the middle of the crowded living room.

Darlene is emotionally unstable, and it takes all her strength just to manage a normal routine of life — let alone handle four children in a cramped, run-down apartment in one of the uglier areas of downtown Victoria.

Her husband Jack tries to help her as best he can, and with his easy-going, warm personality, he can give her some of the security she needs.

But now he's worried. He hasn't been able to find work since the last construction project he was on finished a few months ago.

He hopes to get something under the make-work projects planned by the city under the federal incentives program, but that won't be until January.

For Darlene's sake, he needs it now, so she can have the kind of Christmas she really needs—free from worry, a time of happiness and relaxation.

Darlene is under treatment but it's a long, hard struggle. She feels worst when she can't provide for her family and a bleak Christmas with no special dinner or presents would be another terrible setback for her.

A donation to the Colonist 500 Fund can help people such as Darlene and her family have a happy Christmas.

Contributions to the Fund can be sent to or left at the Colonist, 2631 Douglas Street, or dropped off at Avis Rent-a-Car, 800 Douglas.

Six Killed Instantly In Gas Leak

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Six utility workers suffocated, two others were injured and an entire neighborhood was evacuated Wednesday when a subterranean valve ruptured on a methane gas line under repair in northeast Pittsburgh.

Authorities said the six employees of the Equitable Gas Co. died instantly of "acute methane poisoning" when the gas spewed from the broken valve on a pipeline on which they were working beneath a sidewalk. The two injured workers were not seriously hurt.

Grit Senator Defied Age

Senator Arthur Wentworth Roebuck (L — Ont.), who once said "any talk of old age on this side of 100 is premature," died in Cobourg, Ont., nursing home Wednesday night at 93. His death followed a stroke and heart attack two years ago, but almost to the last, he had perfect hearing, good eyesight and a quick mind. As a child, he lived in Victoria for several years. 1—A PRIME COUNTRY PROPERTY

14 miles from Victoria centre, 10.4 acres situated 300 yards from, and overlooking, the sandy sheltered Saanich Inlet. This property is being operated as a bulb farm, but is actually a registered subdivision of 13 lots, averaging ¾ acre a piece. There is a comfortable older two-storey farm home with 1700 sq. ft. on the main floor, and two rented cottages. The buildings are ringed with healthy fruit trees and evergreens. It is difficult to find view property in North Saanich on a par with these Ardmore lots but a comparison of prices will show this parcel to have sound value at an asking price of $125,000. A syndicate purchase is suggested, either for holding or for an immediate prestige development.

Regions Hit 'Visual Pollution'

Roadside Mess Cleanup Target

Vancouver Island regional boards are determined to crack down on "visual pollution" along major highways.

Ramshackel development, unsightly trailer parks and general deterioration of natural beauty adjacent to Vancouver Island highways are to be the target for the boards' joint program.

Capital Regional Board instructed regional planner Tony Roberts Wednesday to represent the board in future meetings with other regional planners and consultants.

At these meetings, a course is to be charted for a "highway beautification program."

Roberts was asked to report back to the board by the end of next February. Planners of the other Vancouver Island regional boards are expected to submit similar reports to their boards.

The program was spearheaded by the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities. The association worked out the proposal at its regular annual meeting in Duncan last month.

Details to be investigated by the planners include:

● Possible relocation of commercial enterprises now using property adjacent to highways.

● Improvement of existing eyesores through landscaping.

● Relocation or improvement of existing trailer parks and the possible banning of trailer sales facilities along the highways.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford told a meeting of the board's committee of the whole that it was high time someone stopped the visual pollution along highways.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, regional board chairman, said conditions were getting worse year by year.

In other business, the committee was told that the 1971 census results, recently released by Statistics Canada, would alter the system of representation on the board for several municipalities.

The number of representatives will remain the same, committee was told, but the number of votes for directors will change in some cases.

Esquimalt, North Saanich, Oak Bay and Sidney wouldn't be affected by the new population figures, Dennis Young, the board's executive director, said.

The one representative for Central Saanich will have two votes instead of one. The three Saanich directors will have 14 votes instead of 12 and Victoria's three representatives will have 13 votes instead of the former 12.

Regional board areas are allotted one vote for every 5,000 of population.

Consequently, Saanich, for the first time, has more combined votes than Victoria. The new population for Saanich is 65,052 and Victoria's is 60,897.

Whether the number of votes held by representatives of the unorganized territories will change hasn't been established, because no new population figures are yet available.

The committee was also told that a major planning study for the region's Colwood-Langford area was "coming along fine."

The study, carried out by students of the University of Victoria's geography department at no charge to the region, is expected to be completed some time next year.

The study is to determine the regional board's planning concept for the area's future development.

When complete Victoria carillon will be largest in Canada.

Amchitka Sequel:

Job Suspension Firm Policy, Not Punishment

The manager of Victoria Plywood Ltd. denied Wednesday that five of his company's workers were punished for taking part in a 30-minute work stoppage promoted by B.C. Federation of Labor Nov. 3 as a demonstration against the Nov. 6 Amchitka nuclear test blast.

The denial came from Newton Cameron.

The federation, currently in convention in Vancouver, was told Tuesday by secretary Ray Haines that the five mill workers were sent home for the rest of the day, were docked five hours pay and had warning notices placed in their files.

Haynes told the convention he was made aware of the case by Murray Drew, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America.

Cameron said Drew is an employee of Victoria Plywood Ltd., on leave of absence to serve as an officer of IWA local 118 at the convention.

He emphasized that what Drew said was not true.

Cameron said about 8:30 a.m. Nov. 3 the plant committee chairman was asked if a general work stoppage was advocated by the union at 11 a.m. and was told this was not the case.

"The superintendent told the chairman that it was not company policy to grant work stoppages of this kind, and if any employees participated they would be suspended," Cameron said.

He explained that about 11 a.m. two spreader crews and the edge-gluing crew quit working.

Cameron said the foreman asked the five people involved if they would agree to take their lunch break at this time to minimize lost production and they refused.

"He then instructed them to return to work. They paid no attention to his instructions and were suspended for the rest of the shift and were given warning slips, the regular practice of this company."

He said the suspended employees were not paid for work not performed, "hardly docked pay for their sacrifice, as was suggested by Mr. Haynes."

The following week Drew went to Cameron's office.

"Drew inferred that the company's action if the warning slips were not recalled could result in unfavorable publicity for the company at the convention, which he didn't want to see, but which was beyond his control," Cameron said, and added that the slips were not recalled.

Drew said during an interview at the convention—that Victoria Plywood company is partly U.S.-owned. He added the foreman who imposed the suspensions was also from the U.S.

Cameron stressed that Victoria Plywood is 100 per cent Canadian-owned and the foreman who imposed the suspensions is a Canadian citizen who came to Canada before the age of two and was unlikely to have any particular U.S. bias.

'Extensive Revisions' in Mind

Brothers Pledges To Study University Tenure Question

Education Minister Donald Brothers said Wednesday his department will review the question of teacher tenure at universities in B.C.

In an interview he said he was concerned that universities had been unable to deal with the problem themselves.

"There are substantial difficulties in Simon Fraser University and an inordinate amount of difficulty at the University of Victoria over the question of tenure of the teaching staff," he said.

Brothers acknowledged that the provincial government has no authority in the hiring or firing of professors at public universities.

But he said changes he has in mind would involve "extensive revisions" of the Universities Act and these cannot be prepared in time for the next session of the Legislature, scheduled to open Jan. 30.

Brothers' statement followed the resignation Tuesday of Bruce Partridge, president of the University of Victoria.

Partridge had been censured this year by the Canadian Association of University Teachers in a dispute that followed refusal of the university to grant tenure to two assistant professors and to renew the contract of an instructor.

Told of Brothers' announcement by the Colonist, UVic faculty association president Dr. Charles Doyle said it was not possible to comment until he had specific details of what changes Brothers might make in the act.

But, he said, he hoped the government would not immediately move for greater control of universities and professors. In the long run, this would discourage people from coming to B.C. universities and would ultimately lower their standards.

At University of Victoria, a great many of the problems could be mended under the acting president, Hugh Farquhar, without the need of more government control, he added.

But student president Ian McKinnon thought that greater government control was "a move that had to come."

"The universities haven't been able to solve the problems of tenure on their own. We haven't; Simon Fraser hasn't. And somebody has to solve them."

Also, McKinnon said, the public generally was beginning to turn against the idea of tenure and the whole question of it was being studied across Canada.

"It would be nice if B.C. could take the lead in this matter," he said, but added he was not sure the present B.C. government was the best one to take the "carefully considered" look at the problem which would be needed.

On the question of Partridge's resignation, McKinnon said that personally he was "very sorry to see the president go."

"For his sake it's probably a good thing; for the university, it's probably not a good thing," he said.

Most students he had talked to were "shocked" by the sudden news of the resignation. Many were sorry about it, but many were also "relieved," he said.

"Some thought that Partridge was the sole cause of our troubles, so they think that when he leaves, all the troubles will be solved.

"But I don't think those students quite understood. The president was not the only cause of the problems the university has had, and his leaving will not magically solve them."

Partridge received support from Saanich and the Islands MLA John Tisdalle who said in a statement to the Colonist that the president "has weathered a terrific storm and just when he had created a suitable atmosphere for navigational progress, I hate to see him yield up the helm."

"In my opinion, a university that indulges in the dubious luxury of destroying presidents can hardly claim community leadership qualities," the Socred MLA said.

"The cry of fair play on the campus must be a hollow croak in the throats of those who cried for the neck of Partridge.

"And the taxpayer can only bemoan the fact he pays for a tune he in no way wants to dance to."

A UVic professor who had been one of Partridge's strongest supporters during the last troubled year on campus said he believed the president's resignation was "a very great loss to the university."

The professor, Dr. J. B. MacLean, said he was also alarmed that a vice-president of academic affairs now would not be appointed, because the position was an important one.

But, he said, he was "very grateful we have a man of Dean Farquhar's stature" to step into Partridge's shoes. Education Dean Hugh Farquhar has been appointed interim president.

Doyle said he felt the university needed an "eminent academic" to be its next full-time president. And, he added, "at this time it would be very nice if he were a Canadian."

Indian Plight Shown

The preliminary results of a study of B.C.'s non-status Indians show that 65 per cent of them were unemployed last summer.

The analysis of a survey, made under the sponsorship of an Opportunities for Youth grant, was presented to the annual meeting in Victoria Wednesday of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians by Prof. W. T. Stanbury of the University of B.C.'s commerce faculty and Jay Seegal, who is working on his doctorate in anthropology at UBC.

There are between 40,000 and 60,000 non-status Indians in B.C. Non-status describes a person who is genetically and culturally an Indian but for one reason or another is not defined as one under the federal Indian Act.

Such persons often are Indian women who marry persons who are not registered as Indians. Others may be Indians who voluntarily sever their ties with a band under the enfranchisement section of the Indian Act.

Stanbury told the meeting the survey results will be in final form in January, when the data will be compared with parallel material on registered Indians and the general B.C. population.

Last summer's survey involved questioning 1,308 persons, most of whom lived in the interior or northern districts of B.C. The only Vancouver Island centre surveyed was Victoria.

Results show most non-status Indians have nine or fewer years of schooling and the largest fraction of the population was unskilled in terms of labor.

About 57 per cent of the respondents said they had been to a Canada Manpower office and 37 per cent said they had not. However, 80 per cent of those going to a Manpower office for assistance, when asked whether they found the counselling helpful, either did not answer the question or said it was not helpful.

Most of the non-status Indians who had jobs said they found employment through personal applications. For example, only 0.9 per cent attributed their success to a union and 1.9 credited Canada Manpower.

Seizure Blamed For Accident

Victoria police said Metro Shabtowski of 2735 Strathmore is believed to have had a seizure while driving south on Vancouver near Johnson at 4:37 p.m. Wednesday, causing his car to be in collision with a car owned by Christopher Wright of 3441 Harriet.

Shabtowski was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Camosun Budget Estimated 'About 1.1 Mills'

First estimates show Camosun College may cost Greater Victoria school district ratepayers about 1.1 mills in taxes for the 1972-73 fiscal year.

A provisional budget presented to the finance committee of the college council Wednesday night showed estimated expenditures of $2,314,248 for the year which will begin April 1, 1972.

But college officials told the committee that local taxpayers will have to raise only $449,651 of this, the rest being covered by tuition fees, grants from provincial and federal governments, and an estimated surplus of $150,000 from this year's college operations.

The college has been in operation for nine months, beginning in July.

The mill rate for 1971-72 was about .7 mills for the nine months. This would be .93 mills projected over a 12-month period.

When the college was first planned in the fall of 1970, taxpayers were told it would not cause any increase in costs because the Lansdowne campus was available for it to work from.

The projected budget — which college officials said was still "only a rough estimate of costs, because the number of students for next year could not be determined — contains provisions for several new programs which the council has approved in principle.

These programs, mainly in the technical and science fields, will require new faculty, new equipment and small additions to two huts on campus.

The provisional budget will be discussed by the full council at a meeting Tuesday night.
